Which Was the Star?
French Hunger Army.
White House Music?
Four Times Nothing.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

ASTRONOMERS can turn back to any date in history and show just where the stars, planets and "regular" comets were on any night.

In the admirable planetarium built by Philadelphia, in imitation of Chicago, visitors may see the heavens exactly as they were when the shepherds looked up at them on the hills of Palestine on the first Christmas Eve in history, when the star was shining in the East.

Scientists say the correct date of Christ's birth, as nearly as it can be calculated, was six years before the beginning of the Christian era.

Visitors to Philadelphia's planetarium see the sky of December 24, in the year 6 B. C., but do not see the Star of Bethlehem.

ASTRONOMERS cannot guess which star the Magi followed. One astronomer says the "star" may have been a brilliant comet. Another suggests that a brilliant "conjunction" of Saturn, Jupiter and Mars occurred in the spring of 6 B. C.

Another astronomer very sensibly suggests that the Star of Bethlehem was probably a miracle "and we have no right to try to explain miracles."

WHILE OTHER countries have gone through serious after the war troubles, millions in England, on the dole, more millions in America on a disguised dole, France has been the most prosperous of nations.

Now even in France distress and hunger at last appear. Photographs of a great army of "hunger marchers" merging on Paris from all parts of France, show many of the marchers carrying shoes tied around their necks to save the shoes.

IT IS a depressing sight, yet viewed historically, how encouraging. There was a day in France, before the revolution got rid of the kings and the parasite nobility, when semi-starvation was the normal condition among French peasants.

The "jacquerie," ferocious uprising of peasants, was a frantic protest against hunger. Miserable peasants taxed for the benefit of royalty and nobility were not allowed to kill, much less eat, the deer and wild boars that destroyed their crops.

It was even necessary during a plague to forbid survivors to eat the corpses of those that died of the plague.

Educated Frenchmen, which means 999 out of every 1,000, know that today's hunger strike, the warmly dressed Frenchmen carrying or wearing substantial hobnail shoes, would have seemed like a prosperity procession in France before the revolution.

Read Taine's "Ancient Regime."

A GENTLEMAN who has supplied New Year's Eve White House music for sixteen years, says he must "find out whether the Roosevelt's like their music hot or classical," for, you never can tell what a presidential family likes.

He played Strauss waltzes, which he considers classical, for the Woodrow Wilson family. Then "got up his courage one night and cut loose with 'Alexander's Ragtime Band' and it wowed 'em."

It is safe to tell the provider of music that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will not allow old Presidents and statesmen looking down from the White House walls to be shocked with any "hot mamma" concoctions.

IN PENNSYLVANIA, 35,000 candidates for state liquor jobs protest because the examination is difficult and foolish. Truck drivers are asked to parse and spell. They might better be asked to back up, turn around and prove their acquaintance with truck machinery.

One question much resented was:

"Four times nothing equals what?"

Many applicants answered "four." They might have answered that, in politics, "once nothing" often equals a good salary and the right to help make foolish laws.

IN LOUISIANA, a crazed Negro standing on the river bank with a shotgun wounded seriously five men, engineers and others passing in a government boat. The Sheriff shot Pierre Guillory, the Negro, killed him. You read that Guillory was released from the state insane asylum a month ago, and wonder at such a reckless release.

You might wonder also at the number of confirmed criminals released from prison to resume their various lines of crime.

NEBRASKA BANKS having lost this year $190,000 in holdups, the American Legion organizing a sharpshooting-anti-bank-robber campaign announces that bandits will do well to select some other state.

In one state, bank bandits are first punished with the lash, then jailed, and, one experienced bank bandit announces:

"I keep out of that state and so do others that know their business, although there are several banks in it that could easily be robbed."

BRAZIL, FOLLOWING our example, proposes to recognize Russia, moved by the high moral impulse that moved us, namely, the hope of selling goods, and perhaps somewhat ashamed of trying to tell Russia what kind of government she must have.

Brazil, with a surplus of ten million sacks of coffee, would be much obliged if Russia would

Balks Divorce

MRS. STEFANI ROSE LANG

DOCTOR LOSES DIVORCE SUIT

Pretty Stefani Rose Lang, who returned from Vienna to learn her doctor husband was seeking a divorce, today won her contest of the suit.

Judge Thomas M. Marshall refused to grant a divorce to Dr. E. J. Lang, East End physician, who married Mrs. Lang in her native Vienna after he had studied medicine there.

Mrs. Lang charged her husband sent her home to Vienna because he was unable to support her here. She was to return to Pittsburgh later, she said. Failing to receive word from her husband, she came back of her own accord, she said, and learned then of the divorce action.

Judge Marshall said that letters exchanged between them shortly after the wife's return to Vienna indicated convincingly that the greatest affection existed between them at the time she left for Austria. He said he was convinced she had gone only at the suggestion of her husband.

Helen Richey Begins Endurance Flight

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Planning to be aloft until after New Year's, Helen Richey and Mrs. Frances Harrell Marsalis took off in their plane at 10:42 a. m. today in an effort to set a women's endurance refueling record.

The plane is the same in which Mrs. Marsalis and Viola Gentry failed to set a record December 10 and 11, when they were forced down due to inability to refuel during high winds. Miss Gentry since has become ill and Miss Richey came here from Pittsburgh to take her place.

Beer Sales Banned On Penn Campus

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Dr. George W. McClelland, vice president of the University of Pennsylvania, had announced today that the sale of beer on the university's campus will not be permitted because most of the students are too young.

Woman Loses Life In Yule Tree Fire

The tree caught fire from a short circuit.

FRENCH JAIL U. S. PAIR IN SPY PLOT

Raiders Trap Ten Accused of Selling War Secrets

PARIS, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—An American salesman and his wife and a naturalized Canadian couple were under arrest today charged by the French police of heading an alleged espionage service reaching into the French Ministry of Marine itself.

Ten arrests in all were made, but the police said one other leader, whom they did not name, had escaped.

The American salesman was described by police as Robert Switz, 28, born in East Orange, N. J. Police said they believe him to be the chief of a band of 10 persons, including five women, all of whom are held.

Previously the police announced they had made 18 arrests but later they indicated eight of them had been released temporarily.

The gendarmes said they found 19,000 francs in Switz' room, together with a number of military documents.

They said others of the alleged

Born in Wilkinsburg, April 30, 1900, Lytle spent his boyhood on a farm in Bethel township. He was graduated from the University of Pittsburgh in 1921 and entered newspaper work with the old Tri-State News Bureau. Later he joined the staff of the Chronicle-Telegraph and afterward became a feature writer on the Pittsburgh Press.

In 1922 Lytle married Leila Hill. Three children were born to them, William G. Lytle III, James Hill Lytle and Nancy Adair Lytle.

A little more than a year ago Lytle resigned from the editorial department of the Pittsburgh Press for a period of rest following a nervous breakdown. He returned to newspaper work several months ago as an editorial writer for the Post-Gazette.

CHILD LABOR FOES AGAIN BEAT G.O.P.

Ratification of Federal Amendment Nears In Legislature

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Dec. 20.—Stumbling and staggering to a close, this special session of the Legislature seems destined to save only ratification of the federal child labor amendment and old age assistance out of the comprehensive social and labor legislative program submitted by Gov. Pinchot six weeks ago.

The child labor amendment is going through only because of a series of successful parliamentary maneuvers late yesterday in the House, when the Republican organization bowed, stubbornly, blindly and in the spirit of political suicide, to a combination of Republicans and Democrats led by Representative Darlington Hoopes, Berks County Socialist.

It Is Time to Stop Destructive Taxation, Says W. R. Hearst

SAN SIMEON, Cal., Dec. 19, 1933.

To the Editors of the Hearst Papers:

THE BURDENSOME and universally injurious income tax has been raised up to be the Frankenstein of our economic life.

It is as un-American, as subversive of democratic principles, as fatal to free institutions, as the recently repudiated policy of prohibition.

It builds impudent bureaucracies to oppress and outrage the citizens.

It encourages evasion, legitimate and criminal, of unjust and resented tax extortion.

It breeds contempt for government and hatred of law.

It makes the government a racketeer and a most offensive one, doing its best to rob the citizen and practically confiscate his property.

It makes the citizen to a degree a hijacker, doing his best to rob the racketeer.

It complicates business, interferes with employment, prevents investment in industry, and retards the return to prosperity.

It obviously diminishes drastically the purchasing power of the community.

NO ONE has money to spend at the stores when he has to give most of it to the government.

The curse of modern government is excessive expenditure and oppressive taxation, with the added evils of injustice and discrimination.

Burdensome taxation has always bred revolution.

It has been the destruction of many forms of government.

It is the disgrace of our present system.

The excessive income tax creates and aggravates class distinction, and will eventually destroy our democracy of equality and substitute the vicious class conflict of Communism and Fascism.

A good government league should be formed in this country, and the basis of its demands should be economical government and reasonable taxation.

THE HERD of political parasites living on the life blood of the nation should be disinfected and eliminated, in much the same manner as we would attack any disease, of the human body or the body politic.

The loafers and hangers-on in politics should be put to work in productive enterprise.

Taxes should be drastically reduced and government should protect the people in the possession of the money they have honestly earned, instead of robbing them of their earnings through extortionate taxation.

Please make a consistent crusade to free the nation from political parasites, from extravagant bureaucracy, and from oppressive taxation.

SPECULATOR VANISHES IN N. Y.

U. S. Joins in Hunt For Boy Plunger Of Wall St.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Jesse L. Livermore, wealthy stock market operator, was missing today under circumstances that led his wife to tell authorities she believed him kidnaped.

There has been no trace since 3 p. m. yesterday of the man whose spectacular operations in Wall street earned him the title of "The Boy Plunger" in his younger days.

The Department of Justice today ordered its agents in the Bureau of Investigation, which handles kidnaping cases under the federal law, to enter the case in co-operation with New York police.

WIFE DISTRAUGHT

Mrs. Livermore, distraught and waiting for some word at her Park avenue home, first communicated with police last midnight to tell them she thought her husband had been abducted.

Livermore's invariable custom, she said, was to telephone her regularly when he was away from home.

Police checked without success various hospitals and hotels, and sought out for questioning friends who might ordinarily have met him at his favorite haunts.

At the Livermore apartment, the butler informed callers that Mrs. Livermore was resting and waiting some word that might give a clue to her husband's whereabouts. The main entrance to the apartment building was locked, and only residents and persons proving they had legitimate business were admitted.

IN FINANCIAL DISTRICT

Livermore was seen yesterday in the financial district, as was customary. One of the partners of Pearl & Co., which has handled much of his brokerage business, said he had an account with them and had been in yesterday on one of his regular visits. Brokers were mystified by his disappearance.

Livermore has made, lost and re-made millions in his financial career. He has been called "the Wizard of Wall Street" and "the Cotton King."

A tight-lipped New Englander, he played a lone hand, and usually no one knew definitely what he was doing in Wall Street.

Born on a farm in West Action, Mass., he went straight to a

FELON CAUGHT, OFFICER SHOT

PARIS, Ill., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Eugene Teague, Indiana state highway patrolman, was shot probably fatally today in a pistol battle on a Paris street as Indiana and Illinois officers ambushed Edward Shouse, escaped convict from the Michigan City (Ind.) penitentiary.

Shouse and two women companions were captured.

The Indiana highway police had learned in advance that Shouse would be here, and 15 patrolmen from that state were waiting with a half-dozen Edgar County deputy sheriffs in front of the France Hotel when the fugitive drove up.

The police recognized the convict's car, which he had bought in Terre Haute.

A police car drove alongside at the curb. Suddenly Shouse recognized that he was trapped, and the police and convict started shooting.

Teague was shot twice through the head. His death was expected at Paris Hospital. Shouse surrendered, and preparations were made to rush him back to Indiana immediately.

'St. Nick's' Church Menaced by Sea

BARI, Italy, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The sea today invaded the crypt of St. Nicholas, traditional original of Santa Claus, forcing a hurried removal of urns and ornaments.

The inundation was caused by a tidal wave which flooded St. Nicholas Church. Three deaths were reported from other parts of Italy from cold.

English Fog Sends Steamers on Rocks

LONDON, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—While a thick fog shrouded Southeastern England and the English Channel, the S. S. Fratton, carrying 10 passengers, grounded today at the Isle of Wight, was refloted at high tide.

The same fog sent the Norwegian steamer Viator ashore at about with the fog, delaying suburban trains.

Beer at Bars In Rum Shops Illegal

Those optimistic holders of liquor licenses who have been selling beer over the bar were handed a jolting piece of news today by D. D. Hill, an assistant director in the state's Department of Revenue.

Hill announced that he had obtained a ruling from the Attorney General's office which makes clear that beer cannot be sold over a bar or counter in any place where whisky is sold.

Those who have only beer licenses, however, may continue to serve over a counter. The same ruling was obtained from Deputy Attorney General Wilhelm F. Knaeur by Attorney James A. Wright, counsel for the Western Pennsylvania Restaurant Owners' Association.

There was more bad news today for licensees. The Senate in Harrisburg defeated the bill which would have allowed the sale of liquor between midnight and 2 a. m. January 1, when the New Year's celebration will be at its height. The liquor laws forbid sales on holidays.

Hill, Mail Chief, Resigns Job Here

Announcement of the resignation of Lucius L. Hill, former superintendent of mails here, after 42 years in the postal service, was made today. Hill entered the service in 1891 as a clerk, and, after serving as superintendent at Wilkinsburg and assistant superintendent in Pittsburgh, he was promoted to superintendent of the mails in 1931.

He was transferred to the Ferry street terminal six months ago. He lives at 106 Biddle avenue, Wilkinsburg. The resignation will be effective January 1.

First Downtown Rum Store Picked

Pittsburgh's first downtown liquor store at 342 Boulevard of the Allies is owned by Philip W. Gundelfinger, who with his father W. C. Gundelfinger, operated one of the last liquor stores licensed in Pittsburgh before prohibition. The Gundelfingers were granted a license April 10, 1919, to operate a liquor store at 212-16 Diamond street.

Snyder Rum Act Repealer Passed

HARRISBURG, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Only the formality of signatures is necessary to make the Snyder-Armstrong prohibition enforcement act extinct.

The Malina bill, repealing Pennsylvania's dry law, was passed finally in the Senate today. The House already has approved it.

PINCHOT LOSES P. S. C. FIGHT

HARRISBURG, Dec. 20.—The Senate, by a vote of 27 to 19, this afternoon refused to confirm P. S. Stahlnecker as a member of the Public Service Commission.

The outcome was a stunning defeat for Gov. Pinchot and the administration forces, which had forced the vote on a motion to discharge the committee on executive nominations from consideration of the nomination not only of Stahlnecker, but Commissioners C. Jay Goodnough, George W. Woodruff, Herman Goldberg and Frederick P. Gruenberg.

Senator Samuel Salus, of Philadelphia, made the motion to discharge the committee, of which Senator Chauncey W. Parkinson, of Greene County, is chairman. Senator William D. Mansfield, of McKeesport, seconded the Salus motion.

McNair Gives 'Scoop' To School Paper

William N. McNair intends to be inaugurated Mayor of Pittsburgh in the lobby of the City-County Building.

The Mayor-elect, who has suddenly turned a cold shoulder on Pittsburgh newspapermen, gave this "scoop" to a feature writer on the Peabody High School paper, The Civitan.

ELECTION CASE WITH JURY

For the second time a jury today was deliberating the guilt or innocence of six election board officers of the Ninth District, Third Ward, accused of falsifying returns at the 1932 general election.

The 12 men retired at 11:45 a. m. today after the charge by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker in Federal Court.

In the first trial of the case the jury disagreed after being out more than 30 hours.

As in the first case all defendants took the stand yesterday and made a denial of the charges against them. The government contended markings on some of the ballots showed fraud and that many straight Democratic ballots were missing.

Probers Blame Nazis For Reichstag Fire

LONDON, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The "legal commission of inquiry into the burning of the Reichstag," an unofficial organization of investigators, reported today it had concluded that the Nazis themselves, or through others, burned the Reichstag Building in Berlin last February.

Thieves Take Duds of Elk Officers

Four men forced their way into the Allegheny Lodge of the Elks in Cedar avenue early today during a party and began collecting a wardrobe that would do justice, perhaps, to the Prince of Wales.

They chased the attendants of the cloak room, then swept the clothes racks of overcoats, hats, gloves and what-not.

But they had to fight for their haberdashery. The cloak-room men sounded the alarm and a half-dozen Elks descended upon the raiders.

One gentleman was not only beaten so thoroughly that he had to be treated at Allegheny General Hospital, but he was also arrested. He was listed as Norman Richardson, 31, of Federal street.

The victims, sartorially speaking, included quite a few politicians. Two, who gave their address as the City-County Building, were William Appel, who gave up a hat, and Leo Connell, who lost an overcoat.

Chief of Police Ralph Miller, of Dormont, was clipped for a scarf. Others included, according to the police, Henry G. Klush, of Butler street; Richard Walker, of Park boulevard, Dormont; W. F. Wright, of Meadowcroft avenue, Mt. Lebanon; A. H. List, McKeesport, and J. D. Stiffler, of Suismon street.

WOODIN VICTIM OF COLLAPSE

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 20.—(INS.)—William H. Woodin, 65-year-old Secretary of the Treasury on leave of absence, has suffered a general collapse, attendants at the hospital to which he was removed admitted today.

Not only is his throat affliction worse, physicians said, but his nervous system has been racked by his hectic months in Washington during the banking crisis.

Secretary's Woodin's temperature again today ran around 100 degrees. No friends are allowed to see him, and physicians said he would be kept absolutely quiet for the next several weeks.

Woodin came to Tucson, where his son, William H. Woodin, Jr., has been living, in an effort to build up his health.

Woman Writer Held Captive By Robbers

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—(INS.)—Mrs. Emily Tapscott Clark Balch, author and widow of Edwin Swift Balch, noted exprorer, was held prisoner in her home for several hours early today by two Negroes who finally departed after she persuaded them to accept a ring worth $500 in lieu of the valuable collection of Balch silver, she reported to police.

Worst 'Smog' Casts Pall Over Downtown Streets

Lighted Christmas trees and automobile headlights vied with the lighted windows of the skyscrapers in piercing the gloom.

Later rain and wind dissipated some of the murkiness.

Yesterday when you took a breath you inhaled millions of particles of dust and dirt. According to H. B. Meller, chief of the city bureau of smoke regulation, it was the worst day of 1933 for that combination of smoke and fog know.. as smog.

The dust counter at the smoke bureau turned pot black as the air was drawn by a suction pump through an orifice onto a slide where the particles are counted through a microscope.

Solid particles in the air were 10 times the normal amount, Meller stated.

Building Boom Near With Pledge of Early Code

By DON EWING
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—In a series of rapid-fire moves the administration today primed its recovery program for a new spurt and promised added forms of relief for millions of persons throughout the nation.

Three executive orders issued by President Roosevelt, combined with announcements by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, Recovery Administrator, furnished the new signs of victory over depression on many fronts. Developments included:

President Roosevelt today signed an executive order continuing the blanket agreement under the NRA, otherwise known as the President's reemployment agreement, for four months. The original blanket order expires on January 1. The effect of today's order is to extend until May 1 the time for getting industry under permanent codes.

2—The President also added Attorney - General Cummings and Budget Director Douglas to his National Emergency Council and speeded it into action to cut costs and increase velocity of recovery.

LABOR BOARD BACKED

3—The President bared to industry the teeth of the National Labor Board, defining it as final authority in all industrial disputes, with full backing of all power vested in the Chief Executive through the National Recovery Act.

4—Way was cleared for a national building boom with announcement by Johnson that a code for the construction industry, where four million persons now are unemployed, would be ready for the President's approval by January 1.

5—Johnson announced such a swing to NRA in national sentiment that he had little fear of congressional tinkering with the National Recovery Act.

RED TAPE SLASHED

The four months' extension of the blanket code was decided upon because the President did not want any letdown in the steady progress toward codification.

In issuing the order, Mr. Roosevelt slashed through red tape by providing that exhibits of the Blue Eagle of the NRA in any window will of itself constitute the employers' compliance with the blanket code extension. This, Mr. Roosevelt explained, would apply not only to those already under the blanket code and who agree to the extension, but also to those who are not now under the blanket code but wish to go under it as of the beginning of the new year.

Referring to NRA, Johnson said:

"It has been a tough job, but it is going over. There is little opposition to NRA now. More than 70 per cent of the nation's workers are under codes, 85 per cent will be by January 1, and a total of 90 per cent will be under minimum wages and maximum hours by that date. In the face of this I do not expect or fear any congressional changes."

DIRECTORS SOUGHT

A White House statement on the National Emergency Council said:

"The National Emergency Council is seeking to select with care an outstanding citizen in each state as state director. It is studying the extent to which it will be necessary to organize local councils. It is drafting a system of linking these councils together with Washington so that all can function effectively."

Explaining this would save the Treasury a tremendous sum, the statement added:

"The use of a single field organization instead of separate ones for each emergency agency will wipe out all needless and costly duplication of personnel and in addition will make for a more effective administration."

Gov. Murphy Denies Senate Race Rumor

UMEMKOMANILA, P. I., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Further reports from the United States that a move was under way to induce Gov. Gen. Frank Murphy to return to Michigan and enter the Senatorial race against Arthur H. Vanderberg have been denied by him.

The former Detroit mayor ignored another report that President Roosevelt contemplated sending Attorney General Cummings, originally slated for the post, to Manila as Governor General.

VOTE MACHINES GET 'DOCTOR'

The fate of Allegheny County's 1,100 vote machines is in the hands of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

Commissioner C. C. McGovern yesterday announced the receipt of a letter from the company, agreeing to study the machines and advise what alterations will be necessary. McGovern said:

"Finally we've got a stepfather for the machines. I think the board and the public are very fortunate in having this fine concern take them over. They'll be put in a condition that'll make them hard to beat."

Two machines, one as remodeled by county mechanics, will be delivered to the company immediately.

McGovern had little to say about the cost of the operation, pointing out that it was merely a laboratory job.

STORE SERVICE AT NORMAL

Normal deliveries were being made at Kaufmann's store today, with truck drivers who had been on strike back at work, the store management reported.

Settlement of the strike pending negotiations was announced yesterday by Edgar J. Kaufmann, president of Kaufmann's, and representatives of Local No. 249, truck drivers' union, following a recommendation by the Pittsburgh Regional Labor Board that the men return.

RFC MAY GET MORE POWER

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Congress will authorize direct loans to industry by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Representative Joseph Byrns, of Tennessee, Democratic leader of the House, predicted today.

A fund of perhaps 1,000 million dollars for direct loans may be provided when Congress is called to extend the loaning power of the huge government agency, now nearing the end of its present resources.

While Byrns did not announce the proposal as a settled administration policy, it is known that direct loans are favored by a majority of the directors of the RFC and other powerful administration figures.

Loans would be made to finance payrolls, to finance the production of goods for which orders already have been received and to aid small industries unable to finance the increased cost of the NRA program.

WEIR SILENT ON NRA RULING

Weirton Steel Company officials were silent today in the face of President Roosevelt's order putting "teeth" in the National Labor Board's regulations covering its dispute with the steel company.

The steel company and the board are at odds over the method of conducting elections of employe representatives at the Weirton Company mills. The company maintained the board had no authority to interfere with its company union election held last week. The Labor Board is ignoring the election. Legal action against the company is being studied by the Attorney General and the NRA.

At the Weirton Steel offices here, it was said E. T. Weir, chairman, may have a statement later. He was confined to his home yesterday by a minor throat affliction.

J. C. Williams, president of the company, announced at Steubenville, O., that the Steubenville works are operating on full schedules and additional mills will be placed in operation at Weirton, W. Va., within 10 days. He said orders received in the last four days promise a stepping up in operations during January and February.

Table Cloth Stolen From Lawyer's Home

Theft of a table cloth valued at $85 was reported to detectives today by Mrs. I. M. Goldsmith, wife of the attorney. The cloth was taken from the Goldsmith home in Terrace Court.

FRICK, MINERS STILL AT ODDS OVER RYAN

Labor Board's Agent Seeks Peace in Latest Crisis

Attempts to aributrate the Martin Ryan checkweighman dispute between United Mine Workers employes and the H. C. Frick Coke Company at Colonial No. 4 mine were virtually at a standstill today. Fred Keightley, field representative of the National Labor Board, was to confer with Thomas Moses, president of the Frick Company.

Yesterday, Keightley met with Moses, who explained the company's position. Moses said the employes had held an election to determine whether they would retain Ryan as checkweighman. They voted against it and the company subsequently refused Ryan permission to enter the mine.

United Mine Workers leaders said their members did not participate in the election, but instead held one of their own the next day and voted unanimously to retain Ryan. The United Mine Workers is in the minority at the Colonial No. 4 mine.

United Mine Workers leaders contend they have the right to elect their own checkweighman as a minority choice.

JUDGE OUSTER FIGHT DROPPED

HARRISBURG, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—One more obstacle in the legislature's path to adjournment was eliminated today as Representative Kane, Allegheny, Democrat, informed the House he has dropped his attempt to obtain impeachment of three justices of the upper Pennsylvania courts.

The fall of the gavels for this session is scheduled for noon tomorrow.

Kane had sponsored the move to have the Assembly impeach Justices John W. Kephart and William I. Schaffer, of the Supreme Court, and Thomas J. Baldridge, of the Superior Court, because they were disclosed as members of the so-called J. P. Morgan "preferred" list.

Kane today said:

"There is no use in making a gesture when the thing cannot go through."

House Republicans in caucus voted to fight any move for impeachment of the judges. Democrats are on record as favoring impeachment.

M'NAIR 5-1 TAX BILL KILLED

HARRISBURG, Dec. 20.—The Senate today killed Mayor-elect William N. McNair's 5-to-1 tax plan for Pittsburgh.

The measure, proposing decrease of the tax on buildings until it would be a fifth of the tax on land after five years, had passed second reading this morning.

At noon several Grundy members of the Senate found it on the calendar and sent it to the Finance Committee, which is not expected to report it again.

The motion to re-commit was made by Senator Clarence J. Buckman, Bucks, the Grundy floor leader. It was seconded by Senator L. E. Chapman, Warren, also a Grundyite. Explaining, Buckman said:

"It's just silly—this bill. I didn't know it was here until this morning."

PECORA TO CALL EDSEL FORD IN BANK QUIZ

Motor King's Son to Tell of Interest in Detroit Groups

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Edsel B. Ford, son of the auto king, and Ernest Kanzler, his brother-in-law, will be summoned as witnesses in the Senate investigation of the Detroit banking debacle, it was learned today.

Ford will be questioned about his investments in the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., a modern holding corporation which ruled a chain of banks throughout Michigan. The corporation finally went into receivership and many of its banks failed, tying up some seven hundred million dollars of the people's money.

Ferdinand Pecora, special Senate counsel, already has revealed the cold-blooded business operation of its banks by the Guardian group. He disclosed how Robert O. Lord, president of the group, called on member banks to declare dividends so the holding corporation could declare its dividends.

The Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., paid a dividend equal to 16 per cent of the par value of its stock in 1930, Lord testified today at the Senate banking inquiry.

Lord said the various unit banks, owned by the Guardian, paid it $8,164,000 in dividends in 1930, 1931 and 1932. He added the banks had earnings of $12,300,000 in this period.

SEEK TO QUASH GOLLMAR FIGHT

Citing 22 reasons, a petition to quash the election contest against Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar has been filed in Quarter Sessions Court by Republican attorneys. Presiding Judge Sylvester J. Snee fixed January 5 for a hearing.

Notice of the petition was directed to Attorneys C. A. Jones, J. J. Kennedy, B. B. McGuiness and Carl D. Smith, counsel for John Heinz, Democratic candidate for Sheriff, who recently filed the contest against Gollmar, charging fraudulent voting in 21 districts had given Gollmar the victory over Heinz.

The petition to quash was filed by Attorneys B. Robert Averbach and Mead J. Mulvehill, acting in behalf of Gollmar and the Republican organization.

They cited a number of legal objections, holding the suit fails to aver legal fraud and fails to state definitely the total number of alleged illegal votes cast for Gollmar.

BURGESS LEADS TURKEY CHASE

BEAVER, Pa., Dec. 20.—Burgess Dan Moore never brought down a steer with a lariat, but he proved early today he knows something about rounding up turkeys.

In a driving rain the Burgess led police and firemen on a hunt for 90 turkeys that escaped from John Roth's coop.

Doctor Urges Killing Incurably Insane

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 20.—(INS.)—Eradicate the incurably insane and "congenital idiots who threaten to swamp the human race." That was the advice before the local Rotary Club today from Dr. Cole Davis, psychiatrist.

Dr. Davis said more than 400,000 persons are now confined to insane asylums in the United States. In time, he said, "the human race will be swamped unless these incurables are mercifully destroyed."

KATHARINE HEPBURN

'MR. HEPBURN' FOUND IN HIDING

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—The spotlight was upon Ogden Ludlow Smith, husband of Katharine Hepburn, photoplay star, today despite all the efforts he has made to remain anonymous since his wife became famous.

The youthful junior executive in an investment house was found living in a small apartment in East Forty-ninth street, in the shadow of the noisy Second avenue "L," a place within his income. Reporters learned that although Miss Hepburn's salary now runs into thousands, Smith insists that he be the support of the family.

For three years Smith has been studiously avoiding being called "Mr. Hepburn" by keeping his identity a secret. The card upon his apartment reads, "Ogden Ludlow."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(Universal).—Katharine Hepburn doesn't want to comment on her husband. Shown a dispatch from New York telling about "finding" the gentleman, she said:

"Why it's absurd, it's ridiculous, it's absolutely fantastic."

7 MORE NAMED IN INSULL CASE

CROWN POINT, Ind., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The names of seven prominent Indiana and Chicago men, including Samuel Insull, Jr., reported named in grand jury true bills charging irregularities in the Northern Indiana Public Service Company were learned today.

Those named, in addition to young Insull, former chairman of the board of the company, were: John H. Gulick, of South Chicago, former director; Edward W. Lloyd, of Chicago, former director; Morse Dell Plain, of Hammond, Ind., director and president; Charles W. Chase, of Chicago, former vice president and director and now general manager of the Indianapolis Street Railway Company; Bernard P. Shearon, vice president and director, and Thomas G. ring were preparing to flee when they were caught in the roundup.

WIFE ARRESTED

Arrested with Switz, who was said to have been born Oct. 26, 1904, was his wife, described as the former Marjorie Tilley, born Sept. 5, 1911, in New York.

The man whom the police described as a Canadian merchant was Benjamin Bercowitz, born in Jassy, Rumania.

Police identified him as the co-chief of the alleged espionage band and said they arrested him as he prepared for flight—his bags already packed — shortly after Switz was taken into custody.

Three envelopes containing 33,000 francs, which the gendarmes said were intended for accomplices, were found in Bercowitz' pockets while his wife, Clara, born in Bendery, Rumania, was said by the police to have had 12,000 francs sewn into her skirt.

Among the alleged espionage material which the police confiscated were three wireless sets, including a clandestine sending outfit, military documents, photographic plates and movie cameras and large sums of money.

ACCOUNT TRACED

Commissary Gianvetti, of the French police, made the haul of paraphernalia and said that he had found in addition that one of the prisoners, Louis Martin, 43, a Frenchman and translator in the Ministry of Marine, had an account in a Frankfort (Germany) bank.

Martin fainted when the police broke into his home after coming from the apartment of Madame Lidia Tchekaloff Stahl, 48, a Russian teacher, whom they also arrested.

At Mme. Stahl's home the police seized books, documents and photographic plates.

At Martin's home the gendarmes took two envelopes which they said contained 15,500 and 12,000 francs respectively.

They said they found another suspect, Mlle. Madeleine Mermet, 23, French and a teacher, ready for flight when they raided her home and arrested her. It was there, they said, they found the wireless station and the movie cameras.

MORE DOCUMENTS

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Moise Salmon, Polish medical students, yielded additional documents to the police, according to their announcement.

Switz, whom the police described as a former aviator, was arrested in his hotel near the Place de l'Opera

Bercowitz, whose wife was described as a painter, was found in a furnished flat where the neighbors said the couple had lived for the last six weeks.

Secrecy covering the mysterious organization's operations was maintained, but it was believed there had been a leak in plans for France's closely-guarded frontier fortifications which she intends to extend.

For three years, workers in the Metz and Lauter border regions have been employed on a steel and concrete line of fortifications 125 miles long, from which army leaders say a continuous barrage could be laid down.

The roundup is the climax of a two-year search for spies, particularly along the frontiers.

INFORMERS FOUND

Additional information leading up to the arrests was reported to have been obtained from two of 55 Italians rounded up a week ago on charges of widespread robberies in different parts of France.

A declaration that a German espionage service was buying maps of the fortifications along the Rhine and samples of French weapons at high prices was published in France in October.

A woman known as "La Belle Sophie" was arrested in November on a charge of possessing a machine gun stolen by a French soldier.

Reports have been published that Nazi headquarters at Saarbruecken was the center of espionage activities on the frontier.

Spying in the Alpine fortifications along the Italian border also has been openly suspected since the mysterious suicide of a French non-commissioned officer at Nice in November.

400,000 Germans Face Sterilization by Law

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—A semi-official news agency indicated today that 400,000 persons, equally divided between the sexes will be liable for sterilization "within a short time" under the German sterilization law effective January 1.

It was said the sterilizations would be performed by court orders.

On that day, 1,700 "eugenic courts," of which there are 1,000 in Prussia alone, besides 27 "supreme eugenic courts," will take up their functions

Nine classes of congenital diseases are specified, the majority of them among the mentally defective, as calling for operations.

These operations have been estimated as likely to cost in the aggregate about 14 million marks (currently about $6,800,000). This cost, which would not have to be paid more than once, is regarded by the government as trifling as compared to the 350 million marks (132 million dollars) which persons afflicted with hereditary diseases cost the German taxpayers annually today.

Newspaper Does All But Wind Clock—Ade

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Dec. 20.—(AP.) — George Ade, Indiana humorist, told the committee of 100, Millionaires' Winter Club, last night that the newspaper publisher "with the big idea that the only province of a daily paper is to print the news has been pushed out of the picture."

He said:

"What was once the amplified bulletin board is now the guide, counsellor and friend, companion, confidante, court jester, a busy gossip and vaudeville entertainer. It does everything for the reader except to wind the clock and tend the baby."

Ade said the modern daily newspaper prints the news, but can get out a "riproaring and highly readable" issue if there is not a word of important news coming over the wires. He declared:

"The newest type of editor doesn't say that the first province of his journal is to provide information, entertainment and amusement, but he will tell you that he cannot get out a popular paper unless he festoons the more newsy stories with Brisbane, McIntyre, Dorothy Dix, Eddie Guest, Will Rogers and a whole gallery of comic strips.

"And, if you think he is making light of the traditions of journalism (if there are any) and too much inclined to favor comment in snappy paragraphs and pleasant gossip and downright circus didoes, just you go to the files and dig up a copy of the New York Tribune of about 1870 and try to read it."

OPERA SINGER'S KILLER MOVED IN MOB FEAR

Suitor-Slayer Sobs as 'Songbird's' Friends Urge Lynching

International News Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20.—Fearing lynching threats shouted by an angry group of relatives and friends of Emilia De Prato, 26, beautiful opera singer, killed on the eve of her New York debut, police today had transferred her confessed killer under heavy guard to the San Mateo County Jail.

The admitted slayer, Umberto Guisti, 37, former grand opera impresario, said he shot Miss De Prato because she chose to continue her career unhampered instead of marrying him.

BREAK POLICE LINES

The girl's brother, Versco De Prato, a school teacher, and her uncle, E. W. Cortesi, broke through the police cordon and attempted to strike Guisti as he was being transferred to the Redwood City Jail, 20 miles south of here.

Impassioned friends of the opera singer, known here as the "Songbird of South San Francisco," hurled cries of "lynch him!"

Police Chief Louis Belloni, of South San Francisco, declared he transferred Guisti to the county jail at Redwood City because he was "apprehensive" of what might have happened had the confessed slayer been kept in the South San Francisco Jail, in view of the recent lynching of two kidnapers at San Jose, Cal.

He admitted that high feeling had been aroused over Miss De Prato's murder.

The girl's family declared, according to Belloni, that yesterday's was the second attempt made on the girl's life by Guisti within a week.

KILLER SOBS STORY

Last Wednesday, Belloni said, Guisti called at Miss De Prato's home and, after complaining "You don't love me any more," tried to strangle her and threatened her with a knife.

Belloni said he took the man into custody and at the girl's request advised him to "cool off and get over it," before releasing him. Today Guisti sobbed:

"I shot my sweetheart. I shot her because her folks objected to our marriage. I meant to shoot myself—but I shot her.

"I noticed her change ever since she met Alesandro Anini, the New York manager. He told her she had a great voice and that he would give her a contract soon. Last week she broke an engagement with me. She told me our affair was over. I first tried to shoot myself, but there was no bullet in the gun. I tried to put one in and she cried, 'No, no.' I shot her—when I tried to shoot myself."

FRIEND BACKS GIRL ON TRIAL IN SLAYING

Defendant Tells Jury Of Beatings By Policeman

BULLETIN.

The case of Colleen Nanns, 23, charged with killing Patrolman Roger J. Casilio, 38, was given to the jury this afternoon.

Colleen Nanns, 23, was held virtually a prisoner in her East End apartment by her policeman sweetheart whom she is accused of killing, a girlhood friend testified in Miss Nanns' trial in Criminal Court today.

The witness was Mary Livingston, 20, formerly of West Brownsville, who said she came to Pittsburgh after Miss Nanns had found employment here as a waitress. They worked together in West Brownsville, she said.

PRISONER, GIRL SAYS

Miss Livingston said she went to live with Miss Nanns in her apartment at 5451 Penn avenue at the invitation of Patrolman Roger J. Casilio, 38, who was shot to death there September 29. The witness added:

She explained Casilio refused to allow Miss Nanns to go out at night.

Final arguments were begun this morning, and the case was expected to go to the jury this afternoon. In his argument, Defense Attorney A. L. Laughlin, Jr., described the defendant as "nothing but a little country girl."

TELLS OF BEATINGS

Miss Nanns, a former waitress, told yesterday how she lived in various East End apartments and boarding houses with her policeman sweetheart, and finally shot him in self defense. She said:

"He beat me teribly. I lost my job at the restaurant because I always had black eyes. He threatened me many times. He used his mace and blackjack and everything else to beat me."

AERIAL COUPLE PREPARES FOR CHRISTMAS

Gurgling Boy Left In July Now Says 'Mommie,' 'Daddy'

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The flying Lindberghs have come home to their baby.

And now Anne Lindbergh won't have to wireless signals and study navigation charts. She can listen, instead, to the baby words her 16-month-old son, Jon, has learned in the five months she and her husband, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, were flying over a large part of the world.

When the Lindberghs started on their aerial voyage of discovery last July, Baby Jon could only laugh and gurgle. Now he knows word like "Mommie" and "Daddy."

The first thing the Lindberghs have to do is get ready for Christmas. They brought little back with them when they ended their flight yesterday. In fact, all they carried off their plane were two knapsacks of personal effects they had with them on the last 10,000 miles of the trip. So there'll have to be some hurried gift-buying and other preparations for the Yuletide.

JOURNEY OF ADVENTURE

And if little Jon Lindbergh could understand what it's all about, his parents would have a plentiful supply of stories to tell about their journey.

They visited 31 countries or possessions and covered approximately 29,000 miles, or an area covering roughly one-quarter of the earth.

They flew through all kinds of weather, from the cold and fog of Labrador and Greenland to the blistering heat of the African coast. In Europe, they went as far as Moscow and in South America they penetrated the continent as far as Manaos, a thousand miles up the Amazon. And they met the most interesting people.

The flight ended yesterday with a hop from Charleston, S. C., where they stayed one night on their journey up the Atlantic Coast.

Lindbergh brought his low-winged monoplane down at College Point, Queens, after first flying over the home of Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, mother of Mrs. Lindbergh, in Englewood, N. J., where the Lindbergh baby has been living.

ANOTHER TRIP HINTED

So unexpected was the arrival at College Point, across Flushing Bay from the Glenn Curtis Airport, that only a few were present to greet the Lindberghs, which was just what the flying colonel wanted. Very soon, however, a crowd collected, but Lindbergh would say nothing about his flight and after he and Mrs. Lindbergh each drank a cup of coffee, they left in a hired automobile from Englewood, stopping briefly in New York at the home of Col. and Mrs. Henry Breckenridge.

Col. Lindbergh made his latest flight principally to make a survey for the establishment of commercial aviation lines and expects to present the results of the trip shortly to Pan-American Airways, for whom he conducted the survey.

It was reported that next summer Lindbergh probably will make another trip into the Arctic.

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 20.—A rumor that Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh are planning a secret and quiet visit to Pasadena this winter was current today following the leasing of a modest bungalow here by a former secretary of the late United States Senator Dwight Morrow.

Reports here were the bungalow was leased for Lindbergh and his wife.

Mrs. Lindbergh's mother, Mrs. Dwight Morrow, will come here for the Christmas holidays to visit another daughter, Mrs. Audrey Morgan, here for her health. Mrs. Morrow, according to reports, will be accompanied by her daughter, Constance, and a son, Dwight Morrow, Jr., Amherst College student.

HOOVER BACKS LAW CHANGE

SAN JOSE, Cal., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—As an aftermath of the recent San Jose lynching, S. G. Tompkins, attorney, today said former President Herbert Hoover and a number of educational organizations supported his plan to change California's criminal law.

Three principal changes proposed are to provide that nine jurors concurring may return a valid verdict in criminal cases the same as in civil cases; removal of the constitutional provision that a person charged with a crime cannot be made a witness against himself and to permit a judge to advise a jury with reference to the evidence submitted and its value.

Thomas H. Thurmond and John M. Holmes, confessed kidnapers and slayers of Brooke L. Hart, were lynched November 26.

Plot for Kidnaping City Chiefs Bared

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—A muttered plot to kidnap and kill Orval Moster, city manager, and Chief of Police John Watt, as reported by a chance eavesdropper, was linked by police today with underworld concern over a drive on local crime.

The informant, a man who asked Acting Police Chief Reg Brandon to withhold his name, said he overheard the plot in the twelfth-story washroom of a downtown building yesterday.

brokerage house—it was a $6 a week job—as soon as he was old enough to work.

Out of his salary he saved up his first stake, $10, and made $3.12 in his first deal. He was told:

"Quit speculating or quit your job."

He quit his job, and soon was making $100 a week. He married Nettie Jordan, of Indianapolis, and three years later came to New York.

FLAIR FOR SPECULATION

Soon his flair for speculation became known.

He played copper as it rose in the boom days of 1905. He came out of the panic of 1907 with a fortune of three million dollars. Livermore said of himself:

"I guess wrong 40 per cent of the time, but 60 per cent of the time I am right."

In 1915, with liabilities of two million dollars, he went into bankruptcy, then rose again in the post-war boom.

He and his first wife were divorced and he immediately married Dorothy F. Wendt, of Brooklyn. Last year he and his second wife were divorced in Reno, and re-married five minutes later.

Livermore is said to have made a fortune in the grain market in 1925. He bought millions of bushels of wheat, and sold at double the price.

He spent money freely for what he wanted. Unable to get a lower berth once when he wanted it, he chartered a special train to take him from Palm Beach to Jacksonville.

He has been harassed intermittently with threats from kidnapers. In 1925 while in Palm Beach, he heard of a plot to abduct the two children of his first marriage. Detectives guarded the children for months.

His mansion at exclusive Sands Point, L. I., was guarded for a time by Frank Gorman, crack pistol shot and athlete, who slept in the house.

A wedding ring, belonging to the second Mrs. Livermore, was placed on the auction block this week at a forced sale of her jewelry collection.

The auctioneer bought the ring in for the present Mrs. Livermore for $10.

Doris Kenyon's Mate Faces Arrest by U. S.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Arthur Hopkins, against whom Doris Kenyon, actress and widow of Milton Sills, filed divorce proceedings in California, October 28, was the object of a hunt by internal revenue agents today following filing of a lien for $47,398 in back income taxes.

Hopkins, who has a home at Cazenovia where Hervey Allen wrote his now famous "Anthony Adverse," married Miss Kenyon at her Beverly Hills, Cal., estate on June 14, this year. Her suit for divorce followed four months later on the grounds of incompatibility.

BULLETS HALT STOLEN TRUCK

Firing several shots in a chase through Bloomfield streets, a special officer overtook a man who was alleged to have stolen a Joseph Horne Company truck loaded with Christmas merchandise today.

While delivering packages, Harry E. Roehrig, of 937 North Lincoln avenue, the truck driver, saw his machine being driven away in Liberty avenue, Bloomfield. He hailed a passing automobile driven by Special Officer Charles Yost, of 3932 Vinceton street. They overtook the truck and the alleged thief jumped out and ran. Yost caught him.

The suspect said he was William Shearer, 25, no home. He was held on a suspicious person charge.

Father, Son Bodies Hunted Under Ice

ANTIOCH, Ill., Dec. 20.—(INS.)—Searchers probed beneath the ice of the Fox River today for the bodies of John Tendl, 49, and his son, Frank, 21, who drowned in spite of the heroic efforts of Mrs. Tendl to save them.

Father and son were thrown into the water when their ice boat crashed through the thin coating 75 feet from shore. For two hours Mrs. Tendl tried to save them with a rope.

Clinic Head Credited For Cure After Doctors Fail

Five years ago an attack of "flu" left Gladys Layman, of R. F. D. 2, Johnstown, Pa., without the power of speech. Doctors pronounced her throat muscles, the delicate cords of the larynx, paralyzed. Medicine and the skill of throat specialists failed to help. For five years she could speak only in whispers.

Today, she can speak again, clearly and melodiously, but her own family didn't recognize her voice when they heard it two weeks ago.

Frank Hipps is the man she thanks for her cure. She came to his clinic, 239 Zara street, Knoxville, August 1. But she did not dare to hope.

Her family physician, Dr. Frank Livingstone, had recommended Hipps' clinic as a last long chance. Since then, Hipps has devoted four months to her patient training—massage of her throat muscles, a regime of exercise and practice. About three weeks ago, triumph! She spoke her first word in five years, "No!"

Daily, her voice continues to improve. It is distinct now and well modulated, but it is not strained. Gladys smiled her gladness today. As she says:

"Most of all, when I found I couldn't speak, I missed not being able to go to parties. I was so nervous that my breath came in gasps if I ran 10 steps. Now I am doing housework. Oh I don't know what I'll do when I'm well again. I wanted to be a nurse."

SLAIN DENTIST'S LOVES TRACED

International News Service.

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 20.—The beautiful woman who wrote the "precious lips" love letters to Dr. Leonard Siever, 44, bachelor socialite, remained hidden today as police moved swiftly over a twisted trail of love and jealousy in a search for the murderer of Dr. Siever, the "Don Juan of Dentistry."

Dr. Siever, was buried today, nine days after his bullet-riddled body was found near the stone sphinxes that guard the entrance portals to the Scottish Rite Cathedral here.

Officers had questioned many women friends of the slain dentist and all professed to have no knowledge of the mysterious murder.

From the "parade of beauties" interrogated by detectives it was learned that Dr. Siever was a man of many loves. One ex-fiancee had threatened to kill him if he sought the company of other women.

Detectives planned to question the "boy friend" of a wealthy and romantically-inclined society matron who was known to have been friendly with the dentist.

Girl Killed by Auto, Driver Given Term

W. G. Miller, 30, of 520 Chestnut street, Greensburg, was sentenced to serve 11 to 22 months in jail today after he pleaded guilty on an involuntary manslaughter charge before Judge Sylvester J. Snee in Criminal Court.

The charge was made in connection with the death of Rose Inglis, 18, of 613 Green street, Greensburg, who was in an automobile struck by Miller's car on Lincoln Highway, October 31. Miller admitted he had been drinking.

Thief Takes Purse From Girl in Auto

While Miss Helen Strang was sitting in a parked car in Schenley Park early today a thief approached, grabbed her purse containing $1 and fled, according to police. Miss Strang's address was given as 723 Jenny Lind street, McKeesport.

Lindy Pilot License Nearly Lost on Trip

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Charles A. Lindbergh came within a cable length of losing his Department of Commerce transport pilot's license while he was aerial touring abroad.

Officials here disclosed today that just before his license expired he cabled from The Hague for an extension of time. Active licenses must be renewed every six months. His request was granted.

Lindy May End Feud Over First Airplane

Universal Service.

DAYTON, O., Dec. 20.—Negotiations looking toward the return of the original Wright brothers airplane to the United States were opened here with an announcement by Orville Wright, co-inventor of the famous craft in which he and his late brother, Wilbur, made their famous first air flight 30 years ago.

Wright, after months of refusal to consider the matter, stated he was willing to start negotiations with the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, to return the plane from its present place in Kensington Museum, London.

The misunderstanding between Wright and the Smithsonian had been smouldering for years as a result of the institution's attitude in crediting the first flight to Prof. Samuel Langley, who built a ship the same year the Wright brothers did.

According to the announcement, the Smithsonian Institution finally has accepted Wright's proposal that an impartial committee investigate the matter and all the points of the controversy. Wright accepted whole-heartedly the suggestion of the institution that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh be named one of the members of the committee. He even went so far as to say that he would be willing to have Lindbergh serve as a one-man committee.

WORK NOTICES YULE GIFTS FROM CWA

Christmas presents in the form of work notices were in the mail today for more than 1,200 ex-members of the county's army of unemployed.

Ralph W. Gibbs, who was to assume his duties as director of the local state-employment bureau today, will find about 7,000 Civil Works employes already assigned to jobs, and more than 1,000 requisitions coming in daily from all parts of the county.

PLAN NO SHAKEUP

The report that there will be a wholesale firing of the employment office personnel was denied last night by A. W. Motley, state employment director, who said:

"Mr. Gibbs will be in complete charge, though I'll remain in Pittsburgh a few days to assist him. If any changes are needed to improve the bureau's efficiency, he will be the one to make them. No shakeup, however, is planned. No one is slated for dismissal."

Gibbs will take office in the midst of the busiest week at the bureau since the CWA drive began. Projects piled up in Harrisburg are now being returned with state approval, and communities throughout the country are increasing their demands for labor.

JOBS OVER 20,000

Jobs approved by the state administrator are well over 20,000 in the county. The total is expected to grow beyond 25,000 by the end of the week.

Projects starting tomorrow are in Fawn, North Versailles, Robinson, Ross, West Deer townships, and the boroughs of Brentwood, Dormont, Elizabeth, Port Vue and Ingram.

In the city 138 new employes will begin work for the planning commission, 40 on a city study, 10 at Carnegie Library, and 15 in the Department of Public Education. A county survey of bridges and highways will require 22 new workers.

ANALYZE HOUSING

Arriving in Pittsburgh from Harrisburg yesterday, N. D. Moeller, state official, is to proceed with plans for analysis of housing conditions in Allegheny County, according to CWA headquarters here. The study, it is said, will employ 1,500 white collar workers in the investigation of living quarters, sanitation and recreational facilities throughout the county.

Though the survey is sponsored and supervised by the state, a local CWA official said that the 1,500 workers will be chosen from the applications filed at the county CWA employment bureau.

To aid the Bureau of Smoke Regulation of Pittsburgh in its fight against smoke, the CWA yesterday gave approval to the employment of 31 persons to assist H. B. Meller, director, in studies and to acquaint the public in the proper manner of burning fuel.

1,500 'White Collar' Jobs Available Here

By JOHN P. COWAN
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—White-collar jobs will be available to approximately 1,500 persons in the metropolitan district of Pittsburgh upon allocation of local CWA funds for a real property inventory about to be conducted by the Bureau of the Census. Sixty cities throughout the country, including Erie and Williamsport in Pennsylvania, have been authorized to make the real estate enumeration.

At the offices of the real property inventory unit of the Census Bureau it was announced today that the work may be extended to any populous city if it is desired and sufficient of the Civil Works funds are allocated for the purpose. It is explained that this would enable CWA directors to meet a situation where there is a large proportion of unemployed professional men and women and other so-called "white-collar" classes.

It is estimated that with one enumerator for each 1,000 population and 20 clerical workers for each 100,000 population that the number which would be employed in the metropolitan district of Pittsburgh would be roughly 1,500 persons. Headquarters for the real property inventory unit have been established in the Department of Commerce Building, Washington, where local CWA directors are applying for the authorization of the special census.

Six More Artists Given CWA Jobs

Homer Saint-Gaudens, head of the Public Works of Art Plan Committee, announced that six additional unemployed artists in Pittsburgh had been assigned to projects here. The plan is sponsored by the government.

The new projects will include panel decoration for the Children's Hospital, an historic mural for the Ambridge Public Library, a study for a decoration for the cafeteria at Carnegie Institute and decoration for the Mt. Lebanon High School.

Mayor Defends CWA Shovel Price Boost

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Mayor Eddie McCloskey is championing the cause of hardware men accused by city officials of "profiteering" on shovel orders for Civil Works Administration projects. The tools advanced from $11.25 to $14 a dozen.

Said the Mayor:

"Let 'em make their profits. They've certainly taken it on the chin for a good many months. They're entitled to a decent margin of profit."

Bellevue to Seek $8,000 From CWA

An application for approximately $8,000 from the CWA was authorized by Bellevue Council at a meeting last night. The money will be used for street and sidewalk repairs and improvements. The borough recently requested a similar amount from the CWA for installation of two sewers.

OFFERS COUNTY MANAGER PLAN

GREENSBURG, Pa., Dec. 20.—A county manager system replacing the offices of register of wills, recorder of deeds, clerk of courts, coroner and poor directors, has been recommended by Assistant District Attorney C. Ward Eicher, of Greensburg, in an address to county farmers.

The appointment of quasi-lawyers on a salary to replace the costly court proceedings sent in by justices of the peace and the abolishing of the latter offices was also urged by Eicher.

Upper St. Clair Vote Found Correct

No substantial error having been found in the count of the ballots of the First and Second districts of Upper St. Clair Township, Judges Ambrose B. Reid and W. Heber Dithrich have filed an opinion forfeiting the $50 fee posted at the time a recount was asked for.

SLEUTH TO GET FLORIDA JAUNT

City Council yesterday voted to send a member of the force to the resort center at the written request of its Mayor, who said he was forming a detective squad composed of representatives of bureaus in various cities to suppress activities of out-of-town crooks who make Miami Beach their mecca during the season.

The visiting detectives' traveling and living expenses will be paid by Miami Beach. Their home cities will pay their wages.

Councilman P. J. McArdle, casting the only negative vote, asked if the detectives would also receive a ticket to the Tournament of the Roses.

USES TIRE CHAIN TO HANG SELF

Hanging by a tire chain, John Malenka, 52, was found dead by his wife at their home, 2705 Pitler street, North Side, today.

The wife, Susie, told police she found the body when she went to the cellar this morning. The chain was attached to a hook in a small pantry and a chair nearby indicated he had stood on it and kicked it away.

Mrs. Malenka said her husband told her yesterday he had made a will leaving her all his possessions. Last Sunday, she said, he remarked that he would not be living long. He had been ill, but recently seemed to be in good spirits, she said.

The woman did not know when her husband had gone to the basement, but said she had been awake at 3 a. m. and he was in bed.

New Kensington Woman Missing

Police and the Missing Persons Bureau have been asked to search for Mrs. Anna Tedorski, 57, missing from her home, 2204 Camp street, New Kensington, since December 8.

She is described as having long brown-gray hair and wearing a black velvet coat and black felt hat. She was carrying a package of clothing and might be traveling under the name of Anna Flat.

BRITISHER HAILS U. S. POLICIES

Fascism and Nazism can find no foothold in United States because of industry's scientific and economic basis which affords youth of this country opportunities lacking in European nations, Hungry Club members were told by S. K. Ratcliffe, British correspondent and lecturer.

Speaking yesterday at the Fort Pitt Hotel, Ratcliffe outlined the progress of the dictatorship form of government and its influence upon the world. The NRA and coonsolidated program here was considered a logical experiment based upon past experience of a democracy, he said.

The appeal of Mussolini and Hitler to youth is based upon class distinction, a crusade unable of growth here and in Britain, Ratcliffe held. Commercial, industrial and professional futures are assured America's ambitious youth, he declared.

LOANS TO HELP HOME OWNERS MOUNT HERE

Loans of approximately two million dollars have been extended in the Pittsburgh district by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, according to the report of L. G. Lichliter, Western Pennsylvania manager.

Last week 165 loans were closed, bringing the total number up to 641.

The work of a committee of Democratic lawyers aiding in the emergency by petitioning the courts for stays of Sheriff's sales has been highly praised by Lichliter.

He points out that 77 stays have been obtained, for the most part by petition. These delays averaged more than 48 days in length, giving the federal officials time, in many instances, to help the owners.

In some cases, it was impossible to obtain delay, as it was necessary to prove to the court in all petitions that the home owner had a real equity left in the property.

The lawyers acted without charge in all cases where the owners were unable to pay for professional service. The committee was headed by Attorney Bradley McK. Burns.

MINERS' HOMES ASSURED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Acquisition of 2,200 acres in Randolph County, W. Va., for establishment of a new subsistence project has been completed, it was learned yesterday.

The project, to be known as Tygart Valley Homesteads, Inc., will provide a home for 200 families of long unemployed miners and lumbermen of that region, regarded as one of the hardest hit in the country.

Beaver Choral Club To Present 'Messiah'

The Beaver Valley Choral Club, directed by E. Ellsworth Giles, will present Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah," at the Methodist Church of Beaver, tonight under auspices of the Beaver Ministerial Association..

Guest soloists will be Ruth Auld, soprano; Pauline Taylor Weinhardt, contralto, and Percy Dorrington, bass. Anthony Caputo and Mrs. Ellsworth Giles will accompany.

Wife Asks Divorce Over Furniture

Jane Pschirer, attractive blonde, 113 Park avenue, Millvale, yesterday asked Judge Ralph H. Smith for a divorce from Leo Clement Pschirer. She testified:

"My husband called up the store where he bought the furniture and told them to come and take it away."

TIBETAN LAMA POISONED, SAY RUMORS

LONDON, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—A rumor that the Dalai Lama of Tibet was poisoned, and did not die of natural causes as had been reported from Lhasa, aroused speculation in London today.

The rumor, which reached London through the Daily Mail's Kalimpong correspondent in Bengal, was not confirmed and nothing was known which would suggest grounds for his possible removal.

News from Lhasa reaches the outside world but rarely and no word had been received lately of any internal trouble where the Dalai Lama was worshiped as a virtual Deity.

The death of His Holiness, whose full name was Ngawang Lopsang Thusten Gyatsho, was announced yesterday. The announcement, from Lhasa, merely said he died Sunday at the age of 60.

SUPREME RULER

The Dalai Lama was the supreme religious ruler of Tibet. Throughout all Buddhist Asia he was regarded as the reincarnation of Buddha, who died centuries ago.

He also had supreme civil and religious power in the country, and his followers believe that a Lama does not actually cease to exist at death, but that his spirit enters the person of an infant.

Owing to his great power and influence, the possibility of disturbing developments following his sudden removal was discussed by political writers in some London newspapers today.

They suggested that these developments might take the form of intrigues in Britain, China and Russia—Britain to retain her long standing influence in Tibet, the Chinese to recover their real suzerainty which long has been merely nominal and Russia to extend Soviet influence to the Tibetans.

Nominally, Tibet is a part of China, but it is under British overlordship.

Lama Reincarnation Theory May Be Dropped

International News Service.

PEIPING, Dec. 20.—The theory of reincarnation, which has been followed for centuries in selecting the all-powerful ruler of Tibet, will be thrown into the discard in choosing a successor to the Dalai Lama, supreme Tibetan ruler, who died yesterday, it was indicated in dispatches from Lhasa today.

Ordinarily the Chief Lama is chosen by the heads of the three principal Buddhist monasteries of Lhasa, capital of Tibet, with the aid of famed oracles. Iron rods, bearing the names of all infants born at the moment of the Chief Lama's death, are thrown into a pond, and by a "divine" process of elimination the child is indicated supposedly being the reincarnation of the deceased spiritual and temporal ruler of more than two million Buddhists.

Today the Dalai Lama's successor had not been chosen, however, a fact which cheered followers of the Panchan Lama who, after 10 years of exile in China, has won the support of Chinese Buddhists. It was not unlikely he would ascend to the great power entailed in the rulership of Tibet.

MINER KILLED, DOG MOURNS

Tony Huldzik, 45, unemployed miner with six children, of Eleventh street, Stowe Township, took a boy's wagon to the abandoned Fair Haven mine, Kennedy Township, yesterday to dig coal for his destitute family.

With him went his friend, Teofil Miehmenicz, of Woodward avenue, Stowe Township, and his dog.

Huldzik and his companion were digging when caught under a fall of slate. The latter dug his way out and summoned help from a passing milkman. Rescuers dug desperately to release the buried man. When they reached him he was dead.

They carried Huldzik's body away from the mouth of the mine. But his brown mongrel refused for hours to leave the spot.

KAY FRANCIS, M'KENNA PART

International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 20.—Mutually agreeing that they would be happier apart, Kay Francis, motion picture star, and Kenneth McKenna, actor and director, have separated, it was announced today by Warner Brothers studio.

Announcement of the marital break was made by Miss Francis in New York and verified by telegraph, it was reported by the studio. Miss Francis left for New York last Tuesday, presumably to spend the holidays with her husband in their luxurious Cape Cod home.

The separation is said to be an amicable one.

Miss Francis, who has been wedded three times, married McKenna in 1931.

The true name of Miss Francis is Katherine Edwina Gibbs. Before marrying McKenna, whose real name is Leo Mielziner, she was the wife of J. Dwight Francis, New York broker and woolen magnate, whom she divorced.

YOUTH DENIES SLAYING OF FATHER

FRANKLIN, Pa., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Standing calmly before a magistrate, 19-year-old Walter Witherup pleaded not guilty to a charge of murder in the death of his father, Clark Witherup, 50, Kennerdell oil man.

Justice of the Peace Frank W. Riddle set Friday, December 29, at 2 p. m. for a hearing. It will be held in Riddle's office in Scribgrass Township, near Clintonville.

The formal plea was entered by Witherup's attorney, Forrest Irwin. The arraignment took less than five minutes and the boy displayed no emotion.

The charge read by Riddle accused young Witherup of first degree murder for the slaying of his father, who died in an oil lease shack near Kennerdell, December 9. His body was carried 28 miles to Little Canoe Creek, where it was found by hunters.

HELD DEATH ACCIDENT

The boy said nothing in his defense before Riddle, but he has repeatedly told officers his father was killed by the accidental discharge of a shotgun.

A minute or so after the justice fixed a hearing date Witherup was placed in Sheriff A. M. Voorhies' automobile and returned to the Venango County Jail at Franklin, from which he was taken an hour or so before.

As he left the jail for arraignment the boy was solemn of demeanor and to onlookers appeared to dread returning to the countryside where his father died.

MORE DATA SOUGHT

He appeared more calm, however, as he reached Riddle's office and treated the whole proceeding as the simple formality it was.

Witherup's case probably will go before a grand jury January 22. District Attorney-Elect Maurice Breene, who will be in office by that time, was present at the arraignment and drafted the information on which Voorhies filed the murder charge.

Corp. James Brooks, of the state police, who spent several days in probing the case, also was present.

Although young Witherup has several times related how a shell jammed in his gun, causing his father's death, and how he traveled miles over muddy roads with the blanket-wrapped body, officers believe the whole story is not yet told.

Casting No Spell

MRS. GIZELLA YOUNG

SEER IN POISON CASE TO WED

Mrs. Gizella Young, reputed fortune teller in the Munhall poison plot, didn't have any trouble proving to county detectives she wasn't trying to cast a spell on John Berensky, of Homeville.

Berensky's children had complained to Chief George W. Murren that Mrs. Young was trying to influence Berensky to cash his life insurance and turn the proceeds over to her.

Taken to detective headquarters yesterday afternoon she proudly displayed invitations for her wedding January 13 to Frank C. Sukas, of Homeville. And Berensky came along, denying Mrs. Young was trying to cast a spell on him and asserting he was to be the best man at her wedding. She was released.

Mrs. Young was the state's star witness in the trial that resulted in conviction of Mrs. Anna Allas and Mrs. Mary Chalfa of first-degree murder in the poisoning of Stephen Allas, 12, stepson of Mrs. Allas. They were sentenced to life.

U. S. MEN SMASH BIG DOPE RING IN NEW YORK

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—A sensational capture, enlivened by two pistol chases, broke up the biggest and perhaps the only important narcotic ring on the Lower East Side yesterday, federal agents announced.

Four men were arrested and 4,500 grains of heroin seized after six months of painstaking investigation by six agents assigned to the case by District Supervisor Frank L. Igoe.

Five months of plodding work throughout the neighborhood had passed when the agents began to notice the limousines, smaller cars and men afoot who called strangely at a Lower First avenue poolroom, always to be accompanied elsewhere by one of two men.

POSES AS ADDICT

Agent Leitner posed as an addict, won the confidence of habitues of the poolroom. He met Charles "Big Boy" Lewis, 24, of Brooklyn. At last, Leitner asserted, a sale was arranged.

The six agents met Lewis and three other men at noon yesterday at Eleventh street and Avenue A. They reported buying 1,500 grains of heroin from Lewis and James Pignato, 25, whom the agents described as the leader of the ring.

With marked money allegedly passed, the agents announced the four were under arrest. Pignato shouted to several men loitering across the street. He ran. Agent Primrose drew his pistol, fired several shots to keep the men across the street away, and arrested Pignato a block away.

AGENT'S HAND BITTEN

Lewis fled at the same time. Agent Di Stefano, pistol drawn, took up the pursuit. He fired several shots. Lewis halted abruptly and grapled with the agent. Di Stefano's right hand was bitten badly before he subdued the man. The others arrested said they were Louis Martello, 25, and Joseph Schepp, 46.

The agents said all the callers at the poolroom had been led to Martello's house by Lewis or Pignato. They raided the house and reported seizure of 3,000 grains of heroin there, with a complete plant for cutting drugs.

Agent Albert A. Buchholz, who led the raid, took the four men before U. S. Commissioner O'Neil, who fixed bail at $7,500 each for Pignato and Lewis, $5,000 for Martello and $1,000 for Schepp. Unable to raise it, the men were sent to the Federal House of Detention.

COOL TO HITLER PLAN IN PARIS

PARIS, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler's German rearmament program, presented to the French government yesterday, was described in authoritative quarters today as failing to give France adequate guarantees of the security she demands.

While Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour was studying the document from Berlin in all its implications, Edouard Daladier, Minister of War, was planning to extend France's border fortifications to the sea.

Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, sent a message to Paul-Boncour asking that he keep Friday and Saturday free for a discussion of disarmament and German's attitude.

Other leaders will join with Paul-Boncour and Sir John here in conversations through which the British Foreign Secretary will seek to obtain promises of concessions upon which a settlement of Franco-German differences may be realized.

All Music, No Horseplay, Makes Jack Dull Boy

'Tis the week before Christmas, but all is not quiet in Radio's Gilded Palaces.

From the fireworks that have marked the past few days, one thinks the broadcasters must be celebrating in the old southern fashion—or that the Fourth of July is imminent. (But, then, the radio lads seem even to think that "Easter Parade" is a Christmas carol.)

There was a cannon cracker detonation, for instance, when Don Voorhees quit the "Show Boat" in a huff, because of sponsorial tampering with his tunes.

Yesterday Gustav Haenschen's Orchestra was named to succeed Don's on January 4.

BENNY BALKS

Hardly had the echoes of that died away, when Jack Benny virtually turned in his resignation to the patrons of the Sunday Auto Show.

Jack hadn't been getting along well with the gents who, although they recently signed Benny for an additional run of 17 weeks, suddenly developed a notion.

They decided to dominate the program with music, and to allot Benny only a secondary part in the show.

Benny's routine, which made him a success, requires that he spread himself and his stooges throughout the program.

THE BIG IF

So, yesterday, he did the nearest thing to quitting—He announced that he would continue only if permitted to supervise the program.

Of course, the advertiser will not permit this, and it's a fairly safe bet that Benny and Mary Livingstone, his mate, will be among the program's listeners next week.

The situation is an unpleasant one. To lose Benny will, I fear, not do the program any good. It is spotted at a time when the Benny type of nonsense becomes a "natural."

I'm still hoping the boys can get together, and that they'll give Benny back his sure-fire routine. But it's a pretty forlorn hope.

THE LATE LULU

Another sizzler was set off yesterday during a huddle of the sponsors of CBS's "big show," which has been featuring Lulu McConnell, also an outstanding comic.

Trouble had been brewing for weeks. The sponsors didn't think Lulu was funny, even if the audience did.

Lulu squawked about bad material, but her employers thought it was she and not the material which wasn't clicking.

There were words and a few shouts, and a grand finale in which Lulu went out of the picture.

Perhaps you missed her Monday night.

If you did, you'd better get used to it, for Lulu has flown the CBS coop.

Local Highlights on WJAS Tonight

Two other good bets—Jeanne Dix on the early evening schedule and Eddie Peyton at 11:30.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Mrs. J. W. Boyd is almost ready to do a spring dance. She noticed hundreds of birds swarming (do birds swarm?) around the cupola of the Bingham street church on the South Side. Those are black birds and starlings. They fooled us three years ago. Remember?

Freddie Sacher, of Brownsville road, after an evening of driving through fog, suggests that the white line be painted on the highway from end to end and not only at the curves.

Rosa McFarland, Hazelwood—It won't be long now. The judges are on the home stretch. We'll post you as soon as the date of the winning American Weekly title is announced.

My pal Larry wishes me a Merry Christmas. He sends in a poem that ought to please the radio operators. It's all about his sympathy for them because they got to listen while he can leave the house when "dad" says, "leave it on."

* * *

It wasn't very long after last night's broadcast that we got a call about the false teeth. The party who missed them was thankful. I'm not mentioning any names.

CHILD JOB CURB PLAN SURVIVES G. O. P. AX

lution to ratify the child labor amendment.

The action was in sharp contrast to the battle last night when the resolution was forced upon the calendar.

So conclusive was the victory over the organization in the House on this subject that the Senate today passed on second reading—instead of trying to bury—the Craig child labor amendment, similar to the Salus measure which furnished the fireworks last night in the House. On this subject the Republican organization is on the run, though it fought to the last blundering step and futile gasp, rolling up ammunition which the independents will fire in salvos in the statewide campaign next year.

SESSION 'WASHED UP'

To all intents and purposes, the session is over.

Final adjournment will not be taken until tomorrow, and there may be an effort to prolong the meeting, but the session is washed up.

There is little before the House and Senate now but child labor, and the permanent registration bill for Pittsburgh.

The Senate, when it adjourned suddenly yesterday, with no protests from reform elements, killed the slum eradication measures, embodied in the three Kane housing bills; the Fitzgerald minimum wage bill, the railroad full crew bill, the permanent registration bill for third-class cities, extension of the 2-to-1 Pittsburgh graded tax law to the Pittsburgh school district and the state income tax for school assistance.

All of these measures were in Senate committee and are doomed if both houses go through with their program of adjourning finally tomorrow.

Representative Thomas J. Gallagher, soon to be a member of Pittsburgh City Council, made a feeble effort yesterday afternoon to extend the session, but did not push his proposal to a fight.

CHILD LABOR BATTLE

The highlight of yesterday's late session in the House was the precise and workmanlike fashion in which Hoopes pushed the Salus (Senate) ratification of the child labor amendment to second reading on the House calendar.

Carefully and methodically the Berks County Socialist, supported by the entire Allegheny County delegation of Republicans and Democrats, most of the Philadelphia delegation, the remaining Democrats and Pinchot Republicans rolled over the remnants of the followers of Speaker Grover Talbot and the House Republican organization.

First, Hoopes asked that the Committee on Constitutional Amendments, of which Representative John H. King, of Erie County, is chairman, be given an opportunity to report out the Salus measure, which it had received from the Senate. Mr. King was oblivious to this invitation, which would have saved the face of the organization.

Hoopes forced a recess, the vote being 148 to 26.

HOOPES WINS AGAIN

Then Hoopes moved to suspend the rule requiring that a bill must be in committee 10 days before it can be brought to the floor if the committee is recalcitrant. He won this motion, 138 to 46.

That automatically brought the bill to the floor. With no good grace Mr. King reported it adversely. Hoopes then moved that the bill be read the first time, a necessary maneuver if it is to be passed Thursday. Unanimous consent was required, and there was objection.

Hoopes moved for suspension of the rule requiring unanimous consent, and again won.

Apparently oblivious to the sentiment of the House, Representative John Flynn, Elk, labeled a Democrat but one of the followers of former Senator Joseph R. Grundy, moved that the House adjourn.

Mr. Flynn was caught in his own strategy because of some other bills which required action, and withdrew his motion, thereby averting its defeat on another roll call.

Whereupon Hoopes moved that the bill be read a third time, won, and it was read.

'REGULARS' ROUTED

Right down the line the reactionary organization crowd took it on the chin, their vote dwindling on each roll call.

The effect of the vote in the House may be to alter the Senate strategy which called for a motion today to recommit the Craig bill, which passed the House, and which was reported out yesterday by the Senate Judiciary General Committee in a surprise move. The Republican organization in the Senate undoubtedly has the votes to recommit the bill, but the effect would be of no avail in the temper of the House.

There is bitter feeling between the two branches, manifest yesterday when Speaker Grover Talbot, of the House, apologized for keeping the House waiting to act on bills which should have come from the dallying Senate.

Fish House Robber Shoots at Officer

Falling Clock Seen As Cause of Death

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—A clock is blamed for the death of John Morton, 67. Detectives at first said they thought that the man, found lifeless in his kitchen yesterday, had been slain, but they later concluded the clock had fallen from a shelf and struck Morton on the head.

VAN DYKE OUT FOR GOVERNOR

International News Service.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Dec. 20.—Warren Van Dyke, Democratic state chairman, announced today he will be a candidate in the 1934 gubernatorial race if he receives indorsement of the State Democratic Committee at its February meeting.

Van Dyke's decision to seek the Democratic nomination came after Judge W. S. McLean, Jr., Wilkes-Barre, declined to enter the race.

Dr. Leo Mundy, Luzerne County Democratic chairman and collector of internal revenue, indorsed Van Dyke's candidacy during a conference of Democratic leaders last night.

Convinced their best hopes for getting control of state politics lies in the 1934 race, Democrats have been working cautiously in an attempt to unite solidly behind a strong candidate. Other names mentioned during discussions are those of Joseph F. Guffey, Pittsburgh, and John M. Hemphill, eastern leader.

REGISTRATION BILL CHANGES SIDETRACKED

HARRISBURG, Dec. 20.—At a conference today of Republican organization leaders, Senator Frank J. Harris and interested civic leaders, it was reported satisfactory agreement had been reached on the Pittsburgh permanent registration bill.

According to the terms of the agreement Representative Joseph G. Steedle, who last night had inserted amendments striking out the provision for signatures by voters on election day, was content to have this restored. Another Steedle amendment keeps the bill from becoming effective until December, 1934. However, he was said to have agreed that this amendment be stricken out, the bill to go into effect January 1, 1934.

CONCESSION ASKED

The only apparent concession asked by the organization is that the Registration Commission shall consist of two members instead of four, as at present, and as the bill originally read. One commissioner would be a Republican and one a Democrat.

In the conference which reported this harmony were Steedle, Mrs. J. O. Miller, Edward Boyle, solicitor for the Registration Commission; Miss Gertrude Ely, of the State League of Women Voters; Mrs. Lois D. McBride, Harris, and Theodore A. Huntley, secretary to Senator David A. Reed.

Later Steedle conferred with Senator James J. Coyne. The latter appeared to be under the impression that the bill would not become effective until June of next year, which would mean that the spring primary would be conducted under the existing registration system. The Senator also seemed to think that some way should be found to eliminate the necessity for the voter signing his name on election day.

'FULL OF ERRORS'

Steedle also reported to Boyle and some of the conferees that the bill was full of typographical errors, and might have to be reprinted.

Efforts were being made to avert that, it being legislative history that many bills have failed because of difficulty in getting them reprinted in time for action.

This afternoon when the bill came up for second reading the amendments had not been completed, whereupon Steedle moved that the bill go over in order to permit more time for Boyle and his associates to perfect the bill.

The agreement reportedly reached means that the bill is, except for the change in the number of commissioners, in the exact form in which it was introduced by Senator Harris. This change of front by the organization came as a surprise, but the election reform group appeared satisfied.

Chicago U. Honors Harvard President

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The University of Chicago yesterday awarded a degree of doctor of laws to Dr. James Bryant Conant, new president of Harvard University, at the one hundred and seventy-fourth convocation of the Chicago institution.

The degree was conferred in appreciation of Conant's "eminent service to the science of chemistry and in recognition of his position of leadership in American education."

Slum Foes Push Drive Despite Senate Defeat

Defeat of slum eradication bills by the present special session of the State Legislature has inspired Pittsburgh social authorities to launch an "even more intensive" campaign for better housing, with three possible avenues of approaching the problem. Sidney A. Teller, director of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement and a leader in the undertakings, today announced this program:

1—Propose that unemployed men be put to work immediately under the Civil Works Administration tearing down more than 100 houses that have been condemned. This work has been held up in the past because City Council failed to appropriate the money with which to raze the houses, according to Teller.

2—Call a housing conference to hear an official of the Public Housing Corporation, Washington, explain potential means of slum eradication with federal aid.

3—Arouse public interest in preparation for another special session of the Legislature.

The slum clearance plans provided for in the housing bills sponsored by Representative John J. Kane, of Pittsburgh, and supported by Pittsburgh and state civic organizations, were sidetracked late yesterday in the Senate.

Mr. Teller, commenting on the Senate's action, said:

"It is equal to a crime against the citizens of Pittsburgh and Pennsylvania. However, I think there may be a way to slum improvement without the aid of the state. It may come out at a conference on housing that will be held here just as soon as possible.

"All students of social welfare know that the slum is an increasing menace and a burden on our community. We must eliminate it before we can eliminate crime and disease."

The Senate's action was called a "great disappointment" by Miss Marie Dermitt, secretary of the Civic Club of Allegheny County. She pointed out that many other states, including Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and California, already have made it possible for communities to make real advance against the slum, by obtaining federal and state financial assistance. She declared:

"Even permission to do away with a few of the slums would be a step in the right direction and would raise the morale of people who have to live in such festered neighborhoods.

"It is very discouraging, this attitude of the Legislature, but we will continue with our work for public improvement."

Milk Control Bill Waits House Action

HARRISBURG, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The House last night agreed to amendments to the Buckman milk control bill and the measure was prepared for action on final passage today.

One amendment provides that so-called "blending" shall be brought under the supervision of the Milk Control Board.

AUTHORITY BILL PASSAGE NEAR

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 20.—With most of the controversial amendments rejected, the Einstein bill authorizing an Allegheny County "authority" for construction of a public works program was up for final passage in the House today.

Indications were the measure would be passed, rushed back to the Senate for concurrence in the amendments and then sent to Gov. Gifford Pinchot for his signature.

Most important of the amendments inserted was a provision giving the authority unrestricted right to set tolls for bridge or other self-sustaining projects.

The sub-committee rejected a proposed amendment backed by Senator James J. Coyne, Allegheny, which would have prohibited the purchase of the Wabash Bridge and Tunnel for a new Pittsburgh-South Hills traffic artery. It also voted down a proposal to increase the members of the authority to four, of which two would be appointed by the Mayor of Pittsburgh and two by the County Commissioners. As the measure stands the Commissioners would appoint all three members.

URGE PASSAGE OF TAX BILLS

A request that Gov. Pinchot exert influence to have the special session of the Legislature prolonged until the Sterling income tax bill and the Max Spann delinquent tax bill are made laws was contained in a telegram sent the Governor by the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners' and Taxpayers' League.

The league last night sent letters to each member of the State Senate from Allegheny County. The letters, signed by C. V. Shoup, league executive director, read:

"Two hundred thousand taxpaying home and farm owners in Allegheny County will keep their eyes on you until you give us tax relief through the passage of the Sterling income tax bill and the Spann delinquent tax bill."

Anti-Eviction Bill Doomed by One Vote

HARRISBURG, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The House last night agreed to reconsider the Hoopes anti-eviction bill, defeated earlier in the day, and then voted its downfall again.

Members cast 104 votes in favor and 25 against, the bill failing by one vote. A constitutional majority is 105.

SPEED RUM TAX, CONGRESS TOLD BY ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt had Democratic chieftains on notice today that the administration is anxious for Congress to pass the projected liquor bill during the first week of the session opening January 3.

The leaders were told of the administration's hopes for quick action at a White House conference attended by Representatives Doughton (Dem.), North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Senator Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Doughton told newspapermen he would call an executive session of his committee Friday with the view to drafting the measure.

PLANS MESSAGE

Meanwhile, the President is proceeding with plans for his first regular annual message to the Congress, bound to include a report of his stewardship, under the recovery legislation enacted last spring, and some of his recommendations for the months to come.

The President's "annual" message, as distinguished from his message transmitting the budget, will be addressed to the legislators either the first day they meet, two weeks from today, or the next day. The exact time had not been selected at the White House up to today.

Following the "annual" message in a day or so will be the bulky one on the budget, expected to recommend appropriations in the neighborhood of 6,000 million dollars.

Doughton plans to have the liquor tax measure tentatively completed by not later than Saturday. It is to be introduced on January 3, the first day of the session. It probably will be reported by the committee and brought up for action as quickly as possible after Roosevelt's annual and budget messages are read in both branches.

$2.20 TAX SEEN

Hearings have been concluded on the proposed liquor bill. Members of the committees concerned predict the present tax of $1.10 a gallon on spirits will be increased to $2.20 or thereabouts.

The administration wants the measure expedited so the Treasury may immediately begin to receive additional revenue.

All supplies of liquor on which the $1.10 tax has been paid may be required to bear the differential of the increase.

Hearings on the general revenue bill, designed to bring in about 270 million dollars in additional taxes annually, are to be suspended after tomorrow's session but will be resumed after the committee reports the liquor tax measure.

Meanwhile, opponents to the committee's proposals to eliminate consolidated returns, and foreign tax credits and reduce depreciation and depletion allowances to 25 per cent were heard today by the Ways and Means Committee.

MAINE DEFEATS SALE OF RUM

AUGUSTA, Me., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Prospects that Maine would have legal hard liquor for the new year faded suddenly last night as the House of Representatives refused to enact an emergency bill to make druggists dispensers of spirits for "medicinal and mechanical purposes and the arts."

The proposal commanded a majority support, but fell 10 votes short of the two-thirds vote it required for passage as an emergency measure. The vote was: For, 91; against, 52.

Prohibitionists cheered as the totals were announced.

U. S. Appeals Court Voids Dry Sentence

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—A two-year penitentiary sentence and a $500 fine for violation of the federal prohibition law in Texas yesterday was annulled by the United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals which held that Eighteenth Amendment appeal had voided the judgment.

The appeal was brought from the Western District Federal Court of Texas following the sentencing last May of Edwin Smallwood and his wife, jointly accused of violating the federal prohibition law.

Indiana Rum Plot Charges Dismissed

FOR WAYNE, Ind., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment has terminated the government's interest in alleged liquor conspiracies involving officials of Marion and Grant counties, Indiana.

Federal Judge Thomas W. Slick today sustained a motion to quash indictments against Sheriff Bert White, of Grant County, and several co-defendants in the Grant County conspiracy case. Among those under indictment with the Sheriff was Ed Gay, Mayor of Gas City.

Christmas Liquor For Ohio Periled

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Deep in the shadows of the Christmas holidays, Ohioans wanting a drink were wondering to day if the Legislature will increase its pace toward furnishing legal liquor.

Indications were that the Senate will have to show a greater burst of speed if it reaches a vote on the liquor control bill even late tonight. Then will come the tedious effort to reconcile differences between Senate and House.

Fail to Prohibit Beer Sales in Dry Towns

HARRISBURG, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The expressed will of voters in scores of Pennsylvania communities who voted in November to ban the sale of beer will be ignored.

Under the new liquor control law there will be no dry municipalities before the next general election when the voters again may decide the legality of beer and liquor sales in their own communities.

Representative McElwee, Lawrence, introduced a bill which immediately would recognize the decision of communities that voted dry. The House passed it, but its failure to emerge from the Senate Law and Order Committee automatically dooms it and a vote on the local option feature is not possible again until next May, McElwee said.

FRANCE AND U. S. LOCKED ON WINE

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—France and the United States today reached a diplomatic impasse over the question of increasing the French wine quota in return for better treatment for American fruit products.

Following a conference between M. Garreau-Dombasle, French commercial attache, and Frederick Livesey, assistant economic advisor to the State Department, it was said the question at issue still remained unsettled and the outlook was discouraging.

WHISKY PRICES HINT CLEANUP BY DISTILLERS

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Determined to make a quick cleanup before repeal slides back to the commonplace, the liquor industry is aiming at a profit of 100 per cent, from still to retailer, it was indicated today as Chairman Joseph H. Choate, of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, and Dr. James M. Doran, director of the Association of Distilled Spirits Industry, sought to halt increased prices.

With national legislators seeking a tax of $2.20 per gallon, or twice the former federal excise, and the approaching holidays, the pair had little hope of immediate success in forcing a return to former prices.

A schedule of prices from all operating distilleries except those in Pennsylvania were submitted by Doran.

PRICES SOAR

Whisky that sold at retail for about $1.50 a quart in the pre-prohibition days now costs $3.60 at the distillery in carload lots. Blended Kentucky whisky was quoted at from $1.80 to $3 a quart as compared with 75 cents to $2 a quart for bonded whisky before 1916.

Gin was quoted all the way from 66 to 95 cents a quart by one diltillery, the former figure being in lots of 10 carloads or more taken within a 30-day period. Philadelphia whisky and rum were quoted at 85 cents a quart exclusive of the tax.

One New York distiller disclosed that old whisky has sold for as high as $300 a barrel, or $15 to $16 a gallon. This whisky is used for blending purposes.

A letter from Schenley Products Company, released by Choate, said:

"This company, after long experimentation, has developed a method of 'quick aging' whisky.

"Through this method we remove from young whisky the objectionable characteristics and are able to use a much larger percentage of younger whisky in the blends."

OFFICIALS DISTURBED

The administration has been disturbed at the high prices of whisky at retail, but was hopeful the code authorities would take action to bring down the cost without interference from the government.

Doran believes whisky eventually will come down to $1.50 a quart. One distiller proposed to state on the label of certain brands that the cost price was such the retailer could make a fair profit by selling at $1.50 a quart.

Choate emphasized that the liquor industry would be left for the present to clean its own house. He strongly intimated, however, that the FACA was prepared to act with determination for the protection of the public and the government revenue. Officials admitted that maintenance of high prices for whisky will continue the bootlegging and smuggling problem, with a heavy loss of revenue to the government.

Clairton Tax Rate Stands at 7 Mills

Taxes in the city of Clairton will remain at 7 mills for the coming year, it was voted at a meeting of Clairton Council last night. At the request of Mayor-elect Robert W. Ostermayer and two new councilmen, who attended the meeting, Council postponed the budget sessions until next year.

'ALKY' RAIDERS LOSE HELPFUL PRISONER

Agents of the new Federal Alcoholic Beverage Unit, in a raid on an alleged alcohol plant in Mt. Pleasant, took into custody a prisoner who offered to assist them in dismantling the plant, equipped with a 250-gallon still.

After the handcuffs were removed from the obliging prisoner and he began helping, the building's elevator stopped working and he volunteered to fix it. He entered the shaft and reached the roof. That was the last seen of him by the raiding party.

Now the federal men are searching for Hymie Cohen, named as one of five defendants in a complaint before the United States Commissioner, charging violation of the revenue law.

The other four, Earl Brown, Albert Bolek, John Vitza and Silvine Manliney, after preliminary arraignment yesterday before the United States commissioner, were committed to jail in default of $1,500 bonds each, pending a hearing tomorrow.

The plant, according to the agents, was in a two-story brick dwelling, known as the Old Produce House.

In addition to the still, the raiding party reported seizing five gallons of liquor, several vats and an automobile. When the agents entered they found indication that the plant was about to be removed, it was said.

State Rum Store Bribe Charges Not Upheld

HARRISBURG, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Representative Morton Witkin, chairman of a committee that investigated charges of an alleged offer to swing state stores liquor business to the Schenley Products Company for a price, today reported that the committee found the charges to be without foundation.

The allegations were made during a public hearing on yiquor legislation several weeks ago by A. Leo Weil, an attorney for the Schenley company.

The Witkin committee questioner Weil and officials of the Schenley concern, but was unable to learn anything concerning who made the alleged offer.

City's Democratic Chiefs Switch Counsels to Harrisburg

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Dec. 20.—Formative stages of the Democratic administration which will take over the government of Pittsburgh next month were transferred this week to Harrisburg. Representatives John J. Kane and Thomas J. Gallagher are here pursuing their legislative duties which they wish to discharge before they enter City Council.

Mr. Shields

County Chairman David L. Lawrence is always present in his capacity as fusionist of the divergent wings of the party.

Edward N. Jones, publicity manager of the last Democratic campaign, also frequents the legislative halls, being much in the company of Mr. Lawrence, who wishes to see him well placed in the new government.

Councilman-elect Walter Demmler appears to be securing some ideas on legislative procedure by attendance at the sessions of the House, but about the only information he will get is the most acceptable manner in which revolutions against leadership can be staged. It hardly seems possible that this early in the proceedings Mr. Demmler would be interested along those lines.

Yesterday John M. Huston, the fourth Democratic Councilman-elect, came into town from Philadelphia, as he said, for the purpose of a conference with his colleagues and Mr. Lawrence. None of the participants was in the mood to discuss what was transpiring, but to confidants Mr. Huston said that things looked good for his election as president of Council.

He appeared confident that he had William A. Magee lined up to vote for him, which would give him five of the nine councilmen and the right to preside over the sessions—and be in line for the mayoralty should anything happen to Mr. McNair.

Malone's Ambition Deemed Too Lofty

There was some discussion in the conference of the insistence by James F. Malone that he be named head of the Department of Public Safety. It was generally agreed that Mr. Malone through the assistance he afforded the Democratic ticket in the election last month was entitled to a cabinet post. The Democratic councilmen, however, as well as Mr. Lawrence, felt he was shooting a bit high in asking that he be named to direct the police and fire departments.

There is some sentiment for letting him have public works, if he demands it, though the gentlemen party to yesterday's and today's meetings, if their way is adopted, will see that he gets no more than the Department of Supplies.

They feel that Mr. Malone can do good work in that job, but that he should be in a position where he has not the authority to build up a political organization which may be first his and incidentally loyal to the Democratic organization.

Of course, the Councilmen and Mr. Lawrence do not know what Mr. McNair thinks about these things. They know that M. L. Benedum, the angel of the Democrats, wants Mr. Malone; they have heard that Mr. Benedum in the past has expressed himself as believing that Mr. McNair might be influenced by the aura of the Benedum coffers. And they also know that Mr. McNair, a man of simple tastes, has not been so influenced.

O'Toole Not Acclaimed As Choice for Secretary

As to the proposition to name Percy Williams head of the Tax Board and Attorney James L. O'Toole as secretary to the Mayor, there is a noticeable lack of harmony between Mr. Lawrence and some of the Democrtaic Councilmen.

MACKRELL HOT OVER CHARGES OF FILCHING

Brands Person 'Liar' Who Made Such Accusation

"Whoever says Joseph N. Mackrell lined his own pocket with the interest of monies held by his office is a liar!"

With that statement, Mackrell, Register of Wills, threw the county budget session into a turmoil of bitter words and recriminations yesterday.

Unleashing the weight of his anger on Commissioner C. M. Barr, Mackrell demanded retraction of a charge, allegedly made in a letter from the County Commissioners to Gov. Pinchot, that his office profited from interest on funds it handled.

PROTECTING HONOR

To Barr's objection that a budget session was no place to bring the matter up, Mackrell thundered:

"My honor's at stake, and any place is good enough to bring that up."

Hotly denying the letter contained any slur on the Register of Wills, Barr said it merely suggested a change in procedure in the disposition of fee office funds. He said:

"No attack was made on you in any shape, manner, or form by the County Commissioners."

The outburst came after Mackrell had sat glumly silent for half an hour while the Commissioners slashed his budget requests. Told he might go, he rose to say:

"Just a minute. I'd like to know where you get the impression that I take all the interest on money in my office and stick it in my pocket.

"Anyone who gave you that information's a liar."

In the hot exchange that followed, Mackrell charged Barr with giving the letter to the newspapers, where he said he had read the charge against his office.

SUGGESTED CHANGE

Barr said he had not given out the letter, but that reporters had obtained a copy. The letter suggested the fee office collections be turned into the County Treasury so the county could collect the interest, Barr said, and nothing against any individual.

But Mackrell lashed back:

"A hundred thousand people read the newspapers and that newspaper information came from this office. It couldn't be very far wrong. My character's all I have and no person in the world can get away with anything like that against it."

At this point Commissioner C. C. McGovern broke in to say he

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Saw Lindy skim the surface yesterday. He had just finished spinning a 30,000-mile web around the earth.

He's home for the holidays. Some time in January he will remember that he left his tooth brush in Constantinople and he will be off again.

That lad has been in the air so long that the north star looks like a parlor lamp to him.

We saw him drop into the bay yesterday. And we piped him land in Le Bourget six years ago. Wherever you see him zooming down you get a thrill that would nickelplate a baked apple.

Bob Ripley tells us that Lindy's flight over the South American jungles was the most dangerous ever made. Wait until Rip sees us on a stepladder on Christmas Eve.

WOMAN SEIZED, SEEK PROWLER

A prowler who seized a Wilkinsburg woman as she set a milk bottle on the rear porch of her home, at 417 Peebles street, yesterday, and exchanged shots with her son, who came to her rescue, was sought today by police.

The fleeing prowler fired a shot at John Stark, 22, when he chased him from the porch after being attracted by the screams of his mother, Mrs. Margaret Stark.

The son returned the fire with a small revolver. The shot fired by the prowler struck the window of an outomobile parked in front of the Stark home and owned by J. McGough, of 421 Peebles street, Wilkinsburg.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 20. To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Just had a long talk with a mighty well informed man, Mr. Hutchinson, Fox Film man in London. Said the English just stocked up on our securities during all these low prices.

Will Rogers

There is a real weather vane. There is nothing with his feet on the ground (and as much of 'em) as old conservative Englishman. He sees farther than our rich men, that's why they are coming out of their mess ahead of us.

Another thing too, the fellow sitting off looking at you, can tell better how you are doing, and what your prospects are, than you can yourself. Hutchinson says England looks on us as a bad boy, who has been out on a toot, but will sober up, change some of his ways, and be a better boy for it.

Yours, WILL.

CITY CABINET ASPIRANTS UNDER FIRE

Too Many Republicans In Line, Say Sharpshooters

The Democrats' own "Battle of Balloons" continued today.

The unofficial steering committee of the party—and each member of the committee is steering in a different direction, apparently—kept sending up balloons for Mayor-elect William N. McNair or somebody else to shoot down.

Hardly a balloon that's gone up in the form of a suggested member of McNair's next cabinet has failed to attract the marksmen. And there aren't a lot of names left to propose.

SNIPING TARGETS

Today's sniping seemed to center on former Councilman James F. Malone, Bank Conservator Southard Hay, former Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington and Councilman-elect John M. Huston.

All are—or were until recently—Republicans. All but Huston are prominently mentioned for cabinet posts. And Huston is leading in the race for president of Council.

The latest complaint that has gone up is that too many Republicans are in line for jobs.

Malone, Hay, Pennington for cabinet and Huston for president of Council are just too much, good Democrats claim—especially with no indication that McNair or County Chairman David L. Lawrence even intend to consult such leaders as City Chairman John Murray.

MALONE'S RECORD

Malone, good Democrats point out, wanted Republican nominations for both Council and Mayor in the fall primaries. Losing, he flopped into the Democratic camp.

Under former Mayor E. V. Babcock—staunch Republican always—Malone, they recall, was Director of Property and Supplies.

For 10 years, Malone was chairman of the Republican Fifth Ward and later continued as its recognized leader.

Now, having pitched his lot—as much as Malone ever pitches it, politically — with the Democrats, he is considered entitled to a cabinet job. He wants to be Director of Safety, the Democrats say, or Director of Works.

Lawrence and Democratic Leader Joseph F. Guffey don't want him, lest he build up a machine that's the balance of power between Republicans and Democrats. They're willing to give him property and supplies again.

M'NAIR NON-COMMITTAL

McNair hasn't committed himself, so far as can be learned, but some of his single-tax friends are urging Malone's appointment. So is the party angel, M. L. Benedum. And there you are.

Then there's Hay—a Pinchot Republican, recently for a short period Deputy Secretary of Banking in charge of the closed Pittsburgh-American Bank and Trust Company.

He didn't jibe well with the Banking Department, so he went to contracting and finally Guffey is supposed to have secured for him a job as bank conservator in Ohio.

Now he's back and the Guffey camp is rumored to talk of him for director of welfare. His qualifications haven't yet been advanced, but Democrats don't like his recent—if not continued—Republicanism.

Girl Spy Carried To Safety By Gailliard

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan production made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Marion Davies.)

There was a remnant of a rosewood sofa in the parlor. The girl sat down on it, then extended her trembling body and rested her head on her hands.

"I feel sick," she said, "I am going to be nauseated. Would you please go out of the room, darling?"

He went out to the front steps. On the sidewalk, below, lay the dead cavalryman in his smart uniform.

While his ladylove was being pitiably sick in the parlor, John Gailliard went down to the sidewalk, drew the dead horsemen into the area, stripped him of his uniform, stripped off his own Confederate regimentals and dressed himself in the dead man's boots, pants and jacket with its yellow braid and gold chevrons.

When again he came into the parlor the girl was lying on the wrecked sofa, face downward.

"Have you been injured by your fall?" he asked, gently.

"No; it's nerves. I feel better." She turned over and looked up at him. "Oh," she said, "you were wise to do that—" touching his chevroned sleeve.

"Yes," he said. "I must get out if I can. There's nothing to be done in New York now. The city regiments will be here tonight."

"Can you get away?"

"How much law will you give me?"

"Not a minute. But if you give me your word of honor that you'll go to Canada, I'll help you."

"I can't do that," he said.

"I was afraid you wouldn't," she whispered. "This damned war is going to kill us both. I'd rather it did. I'm tired of everything—deathly tired . . . Once I was guilty of a dishonorable thing; I caught you and let you go. But I don't let you go again, darling; no, not if you hang for it. And if you do get away this time, for God's sake, remain in your own country."

"Remain in yours, too," he said sullenly. He examined the revolver he had taken from the dead cavalryman; reloaded it and shoved it into the belted holster. "I'm not going to leave you here," he said.

Not Afraid

"I'm safe. I look like one of the mob," she remarked. But she rose and let him draw her arm through his.

"There are hacks by Trinity and St. Paul's," he said briefly.

But she was soon at the end of her strength, and her legs refused to support her. So he picked her up and walked southward through the silent street. A moment later he saw the shat-

GARLAND LEADS FIGHT AGAINST REDUCTION

Amount Fixed By Act Of Legislature, He Says

City Council declined today to cut Mayor-elect William N. McNair's salary from $15,000 to $10,000.

On motion of Councilman Robert Garland this item was left in the budget, though $14,100 in other items on the mayor's office budget list were cut as recommended by Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, McNair's representative at the budget sessions of Council. This raised the total of cuts suggested by her to $279,590.

FIXED BY ACT

In moving to take the $5,000 cut out of the list, Councilman Garland explained that the Mayor's salary is fixed by act of the Legislature. He added:

"If the new Mayor wants to make a voluntary contribution of $5,000 to the city treasury, that is his affair."

President of Council Harry A. Little and Councilman William J. Soost voted against all of the cuts suggested by Mrs. Smith. They wanted, they said, a letter from McNair approving them in addition to Mrs. Smith's oral statement that he did so.

By repeal of the $5,880,000 subway bond issue, Council has increased the people's power to borrow to $15,700,000, opening the way for a possible bond issue to pay the city's three million dollar deficit.

Decision to repeal the city's 19-year-old subway ordinance was made yesterday, the vote being 5 to 3. President of Council Harry A. Little, P. J. McArdle and W. Y. English voted against repeal and C. B. Connelley was absent.

WOULD DROP JOBS

Elimination of police night court and three police magistrates positions was urged by Mrs. Smith. She also suggested eliminating nine jobs at the city stables, and two clerical positions in Morals and Traffic Courts.

After a plea by a committee of police for restoration of pass days and vacations, Council has voted to do it, provided a schedule can be arranged in the police department which will not cost the city more money.

George S. Davison, chairman of the City Transit Commission, today sent a letter to Council protesting against repeal of the subway bond issue, declaring it unfair to members of the commission who had served eight years without pay.

He denied he personally favored the repeal, and predicted it would not help in the present financial stringency.

Bullet-Proof Bank Looted by Bandits

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Although protected from daylight robbery by an elaborate system of steel and glass bullet-proof cages, the Creve Coeur Farmers' Bank, in St. Louis County, was robbed of about $4,000 in cash today by two men, both armed.

Robert F. Bloom, cashier, was held up by the men as he entered the bank. The robbers, who had hidden in the building, forced him to open the vault and then locked him in it before escaping with the money.

M'NAIR, MAGEE IGNORE 'CIVIL LIBERTIES'

The American Civil Liberties Union struggled along today without the memberships of Mayor-elect William N. McNair and Councilman-elect—and former Mayor—William A. Magee.

They've both declined membership.

Magee thinks the Union goes too far.

That was about the only result of a meeting the Union held in the Y. M. & W. H. A. in Oakland, last night.

Of course, Magee and McNair took a couple of sly "digs" at each other—but that is hardly news any more.

BALDWIN SPEAKER

There was another speaker—Roger Baldwin, director of the National Union—speaking on "The Crisis in American Liberties."

He had a lot to say about the NRA and Fascism and Communism and deputy sheriffs, free speech, radio censorship, movie censorship and unions but the audience temporarily lost sight of him as McNair, invited, and Magee, uninvited to attend but invited to speak, spoke.

McNair proposed a marble stump in West Park, North Side, where anybody could speak on his pet ideas. He said:

"I hope we have some Communist meetings here. I'd like to get up and debate them. I'd show them where they have nothing to say—or where I think they have nothing to say."

DOESN'T NEED CENSOR

As for censorship on the radio, nobody on the radio has anything to say, McNair thinks, so:

"What's the use of bothering whether they censor the radio or not!"

"The farmers are only a bunch of land speculators. When the drop came they began to cry about it.

"Why be excited about the farmers—let 'em take their medicine and get back to work.

"Most of the farmers I know are farming the farmers. They want to put up prices sky-high in the city so the value of their land values will go up and they can go back to their California speculations.

"Well, I'm not for it."

SUGGESTS CURE-ALL

So, as a cure-all, McNair suggests:

"Let's have a good time and not worry about anything."

Then, taking a sideswipe at Magee's plaint that the street railway system is nearly bankrupt:

"So far as I can see, even the street cars aren't going to run.

"If they don't in the next 10 years, we'll run busses or walk."

And getting down, in earnest, to the single tax:

"If we had access to the bounties of nature (the land the single taxer thinks belongs equally to all the people) we wouldn't have to fuss about social freedom."

McNair says there would be two jobs for every man and man wouldn't have to work in dirty mills and unsafe mines. He offered to explain why and when someone in the audience asked him to, he refused.

M'NAIR "BRUSHING UP"

Then the chairman, the Rev. Ralph B. Urmy, heaped coals on the Magee-McNair fire by introducing Magee as:

"A man who is not only a near mayor, but a man who has twice worked for us."

Magee said:

"I didn't come out here to compliment the next mayor at all, because I know his views. I came to brush up on the situation."

And McNair soon dodged out of the meeting with the remark:

ported Hoover for President. It's McNair who has considered him, not the party, but Democrats still complain.

Huston, for years Republican chairman of the Tenth Ward, started with the Citizens' League, switched to the camp of Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell, then running in the Republican primaries for Mayor, and suddenly flopped among the Democrats in time to join the councilmanic slate. He led the ticket.

COUNCIL PRESIDENT

McNair is known to be highly conscious of Huston's Republican affiliations and may or may not want him to be president of Council. Some of his single taxers advocate Councilman-elect Walter R. Demmler. But the Guffey-Lawrence faction want Huston—and may get him.

Meanwhile, McNair doesn't talk much and may have his own ideas about the matter. He'll almost certainly come to an agreement with the councilmen-elect before inauguration on New Year's day, but it may be by the process of insisting on his own appointments.

$100 Fire Damage At Bronze Plant

13, Witness in Slaying Trial

LOUISE ROMAN, 13 . . . . . SHE TOLD OF HEARING A SHOT, SEEING A DYING PATROLMAN

Miss Louise, the landlady's daughter, who in the trial of Miss Colleen Nanns, 23, testified that she heard a shot, saw wounded Patrolman Roger Casilio, 38, crawling downstairs and away from the apartment he and Miss Nanns occupied. He died later. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

MACKRELL HOT OVER CHARGES

had never even heard of the charge against the Register of Wills. When Mackrell said he had written letters to the three Commissioners demanding retraction, McGovern said he had never received one.

Admitting he had gotten an answer from Barr, Mackrell implied it wasn't satisfactory.

Commissioner W. D. Mansfield, absent at Harrisburg, had received a letter, but not replied, Mackrell said.

Mackrell finally stated that he had never touched a penny of the interest of his office funds, and that he had merely come to defend himself—not attack the Commissioners.

Appropriate Penny For Mackrell To Balance

Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell yesterday forgot to express gratitude to the County Commissioners for balancing his 1933 payroll. They appropriated one cent, just before his entrance, to meet a one cent deficit appearing through an untraceable clerical error in his accounts.

Brown, Westinghouse Official, Dies in N. Y.

Arthur A. Brown, assistant to the vice president of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, died suddenly in his home at 205 East Sidney avenue, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., yesterday, according to word received here. He was born in Arkansas.

POLITICS

named as secretary to the Mayor is the best that has been devised. They do not wish to see him shunted into the tax board, with the secretaryship left open to Mr. O'Toole.

There is no criticism of Mr. O'Toole's ability. It is recognized that he is one of the ablest of the Democrats, young or old, but at the same time the Democrats assert that he would be first loyal to Mr. Lawrence because of past party associations.

If Mr. McNair cannot recognize the inadvisability of this situation, then Democratic councilmen-elect may try to save him from himself.

TWICE WED WIFE DIVORCED BY LAWYER

Judge Thomas M. Marshall today granted Joseph Kline, an attorney of 550 North Aiken avenue, a divorce from Mrs. Nurallah Ruth C. Kline, of 5491 Hays street.

Kline, who asked an annulment of his marriage on the ground that at the time she married him his wife had not been divorced from a previous husband, was scored in Judge Marshall's order, which in part was:

"The court has no doubt that the libellant was aware of the fact that his wife had not yet secured a divorce at the time of her marriage to him. We feel obliged, however, to grant a divorce because we believe the Divorce Act of 1929 to be mandatory."

Replying to Kline's charges, Mrs. Kline testified she did not know until after the marriage that she had not been divorced from Pierre R. L. Hogner. Kline, who represented her in the suit against Hogner, she alleged, informed her the decree had been granted.

Judge Marshall also granted a decree to John P. Fleming, of 3827 Wealth street, from Grace Fleming. Two other husbands were denied divorces.

Fleming, past 50, alleged during the trila that his wife was guilty of barbarous treatment, that she called him vile names, expressed the wish that he was dead, refused to entertain his friends and forced him to sleep in a room which she did not care for. In his order Judge Marshall said:

William E. Kerr, of 1955 Lithgow avenue, North Side, was denied a divorce from Jessie T. Kerr, of 1317 Stokes street. They were married, Kerr testified, on August 11, 1920, when he was 21 and she 36.

Central Station Ammonia Tank Leaks

Firemen from Engine Company No. 3 were summoned when a valve on an ammonia tank in the engine room of Central Police Station sprang a leak last night.

Rushing into the basement with their masks, they learned that Engineer William Murphy had shut off the leak. It was the second time in two nights that fumes escaped from the basement.

The others injured were George D. Myers, 22, also of Pittsburgh, and a fellow student at Princeton and Miss Eleanor Bodine, 20, of Philadelphia, a debutante and student at Vassar.

Richter, Myers and Miss Bodine were taken to a hospital at Trenton.

State police said Richter's automobile overturned in a ditch after it had been sideswiped by an automobile driven by Arthur M. Alton, 51, of New York.

"HONEYSUCKLE" Is a Gorgeous Doll

Dear Little Girls:

"Honeysuckle" is 18 inches tall, just the right size the average little girl would like to cuddle up to. The word beautiful doesn't really describe her. She's more than beautiful—she's GORGEOUS.

"Honysuckle" has flexible rubber arms and hands and rubber legs that can be washed just the same as you would wash your baby brother's or sister's. And WHAT A SMILE! And behind that smile are the most lovable, most roguish eyes you ever looked into. They open and close and she rolls them from side to side like a real flirt. By pressing her legs or by moving her body forward or back, she says "Ma-ma" in the sweetest voice you ever heard. She's dressed like a little queen in dainty organdy and lace, with bonnet and shoes to match.

Oh, we forgot to mention her cute dimples, and just as this was written "Honeysuckle" looked up and seemed to say, "Yes, you forgot to tell them about my rubber panties."

"Honeysuckle" is really the DOLL OF ALL DOLLS, and she is going to be so easy to get for Christmas. Shall I save a "Honeysuckle" for you?

When cooking for children, Prudence Penny reminds mothers among her readers, the wise housewife is always careful to avoid overly-rich foods which have a tendency to upset young stomachs. For a dessert that is both wise and appetizing she suggests serving today's $5 prize winner, raisin pudding, for the youngsters.

Easy to make, equally easy to digest, it's just the thing to finish off the noon or evening meal.

You, too, must have some especially good recipes. Send them in to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, so that you may be eligible for either the $5 prize or one of the 10 $1 prizes, awarded daily. No recipes will be returned.

PORTABLE SOUP.

Boil a piece of beef or veal until very tender, lift out meat and let stock get perfectly cold, then skim off every particle of grease. Boil stock until a thick, glutinous consistency, care should be taken that it does not burn. Season it highly with salt, pepper, cloves and mace, then turn it on to earthen platters. It should not be more than a quarter of an inch in thickness. Let it remain until cold, then cut it in pieces three inches square; set in the sun to dry, turning frequently. When perfectly dry, put them in an earthen or tin vessel, having a layer of white paper between each layer. These, if the directions are strictly adhered to, will keep a long time. Nothing more is necessary than to put a quart of water to one of the cakes and heat it until very hot.

MISS RUTH BEITER . . . HER YOUNG ESCORT PROTECTED HER

Miss Beiter, Canton (O.) co-ed and prominent physician's daughter whose escort, 21-year-old Britton Young, college-boy son of an attorney and nephew of a congressman, fatally shot Farmer Charles Metling, 52, in a lonely Cleveland 'Lovers' Lane'. They explained to police that he tried to drag Miss Beiter from the car. These are International News Photograph Service pictures.

BRITTON YOUNG

PROBE 'PETTING' DEATH STORY

International News Service.

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 20. — Private investigators today entered the probe into the "lovers' lane" slaying of a farmer by a college boy.

The family of the victim, Carl Metling, 52-year-old retired farmer, retained private detectives to probe the story told by Britton Young, 21, a law student at Western Reserve University.

According to authorities, the youth said he shot Metling after the latter allegedly attempted to molest his pretty co-ed companion, Miss Ruth Beiter, as the two were parked in an automobile on a lonely road in suburban Pepper Pike village.

Frank Metling, brother of the slain man, in announcing that the victim's family would conduct a separate probe, said:

"I'll prosecute that young man to the last notch. Carl may have been a hot-head, but he wouldn't harm anyone or anything."

Young, nephew of Congressman-at-Large Stephen Young and son of Donald Young, Norwalk attorney, was released under $1,000 bond after he waived preliminary hearing on a manslaughter charge yesterday.

NEWSIES MAKE MILLIONS YEARLY

Of all the mass of information about the newspaper business brought out during three months of work on the daily newspaper code, perhaps the most interesting was that regarding the half million and more boys who form an essential link between the daily press and the reading public.

The newspaper route boy or vendor, carrying on a miniature business, measured in pennies, in his spare time before or after school, has come to symbolize independent enterprise on the smallest scale. The code hearings developed the fact that the business of these small merchants, taken collectively, yields them more than 100 million dollars a year.

Such an enormous total in penny profits furnishes a measure of the social and economic importance of this part-time work to the boyhood of America. Aside from its significance in widely distributed purchasing power, that 100 million dollars earned by schoolboys represents an incalculable social value in thrift, enterprise, self-reliance and fundamental training for business and citizenship.

588,000 NEWSIES

It was shown at the hearings that there are 588,000 boys engaged in selling or delivering newspapers. Of these, 414,503, or 70 per cent of the total, are route boys or carriers, that is, boys who deliver newspapers to a regular list of subscribers. These boys average 58 minutes per day at their task and earn $1,206,250.95 per week, or an average of $2.91 weekly.

There are 173,784 boys engaged in making individual sales of newspapers to the public. On the average these boys work 2 hours and 14 minutes per day and average $4.28 per week, or a total of $744,401.48 weekly. These figures do not represent the entire earnings of the boys, since many earn extra money by procuring new subscribers.

The primary function of the newspaperboy, as the foregoing figures indicate, is the delivery of newspapers to subscribers in residential districts. In most cases, the boys engaged in this work are small-scale businessmen on their own account, buying their papers at wholesale and selling them at retail. As a salesman, the boy solicits subscriptions from the families on his route.

DETERMINES CREDIT

As a credit man, he determines whether or not the new subscriber is worthy of credit until the end of the week. As his own delivery man he sees to it that his subscribers get good service. Finally, as a collector, he collects the small amounts due from each subscriber, settles his account with the circulation manager and pockets his profit for the week.

In the process he has learned from experience a good deal about human nature—such things as the importance of courtesy, promptness, neatness, self confidence and a pleasant address in meeting and dealing with people.

A witness repeatedly called during the code hearings was Howard W. Stodghill, chairman of the Newspaper Boy Welfare Committee of the International Circulation Managers' Association, who has long been active in promoting closer co-operation between newspapers and school authorities.

Mr. Stodghill told the Administrator he considered himself as a representative of the boys, rather than the publishers. He advocated a code provision designed to protect the boys against abuses, such as working during school hours, or in cases where such work would be injurious to their health.

'NOT CHILD LABOR'

By no stretch of the imagination, Mr. Stodghill said, could the job of delivering newspapers after school be compared to child labor in a mill or factory. He submitted in evidence numerous statements from school authorities showing that newspaper boys, as a group, made higher grades and had better attendance records than the average.

Further, he pointed out that thousands of ambitious boys, who would otherwise be compelled to drop out of school in the lower grades are enabled by this part-time work to finish high school. To take away their jobs, he said, would throw a greater burden on relief agencies in practically every city in the country.

Gen. Johnson, in accepting the newspaper code, pending hearing, furnished one of the human interest highlights that brightened the crowded days of labor on the codes.

He revealed that he, himself, like several of the newspaper publishers and others representing their industries at the code hearings, had obtained his first business experience as a newspaper boy.

(This is the last of a series of three articles on the newspaper boy.)

Brewery to Fight Damage Verdict

A motion was filed yesterday by the Fort Pitt Brewing Company asking a new trial in the case of Pete Athas. Chatham street, last Saturday awarded a verdict of $45,000 for an injured back, after the jury had been out 49 hours.

The case has already been tried twice, Athas receiving $15,000 at the first trial. Athas claims that a truck of the brewing company struck a ladder on which he was working on a bridge in Anderson street, July 18, 1927. The brewing company denies the defendants truck hit him.

HONEY COMB PATTERN 433

Favorite One-Patch Quilt

The hexagon one-patch, so popular with the needlewoman of generations past, can be used to form radically different quilts. Two very effective arrangements are given in all detail in this pattern. Though structurally the same, the variation in design is achieved through the distribution of the materials. The one shows a wreath and floral border arrangement, while the other is a repetition of a group of hexagons that can first be formed into a block and the blocks then attached. This one-patch type of quilt—made entirely of patches cut from the same pattern piece—was the first attempt of the needlewoman of the past to make an orderly arrangement of patch pieces, early quilts having been of the crazy-quilt type.

Pattern 433 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10 cents for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Buy sensible things for Christmas, fellows!

Buy things you know your friends can use, and which will last a while, too. Those are the kind of things which people like to have.

Candy is good because everybody likes it to eat, and candy is good for you if you don't eat too much all at once, and fruit and cake and other goodies too. And books make dandy gifts—ask the book seller or an older friend to pick out a good book for you if you don't know them yourself.

Toys are all right too, just so they are strong toys which won't break easily, and are useful. Always try to get toys, fellows, which will be helpful. Blocks are good for younger fellows because they give a boy a chance to see for himself how things are built and how small parts can be built up into a large building.

Speaking of toys reminds us again of the Toy Mission, fellows. So far, the Mission has received only about 4,000 toys and there are more than 20,000 children who won't get any toys at all this year unless the Toy Mission puts them in their stockings. Can't we all help, fellows? Just an inexpensive toy, one that wouldn't cost more than a dime or two, will make another boy or girl glad and happy Christmas morning. Send all the toys you can to the Toy Mission, 100 Wood street, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Now here's a letter from a new captain today, Ethel Rousseau, of Box 95, R. F. D. 6, Kittanning, Pa. She says in her nice letter:

"I belong to the Junior Patrol. I am starting a patrol in our school. My brother has one now. I have been elected captain and have a patrol well started with meetings and all. When the rest of the members get their pins, I will get an armband, won't I?

"I am 13 years old and in the eighth grade of the Scott School which is a one-room rural-school. Our club's name is N. R. A. J. P.—No Rebels Allowed Junior Patrol. We have 11 members now, including myself."

You surely do get an armband, Ethel, and we will send it right along. And the badges for your members, too. We are glad that you are going to have a patrol in your school because a bunch of boys and girls can always have more fun together. Are you going to have a Christmas party? How about getting all your members to write letters to the Junior Patrol, telling us what books they like the best, what they are doing in school, and what their New Year's resolutions are.

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT LASTING FOR COUPLE

A love at first sight that blossomed nearly three-score years ago when he was a boy of 14 and she a child of 11 still endures Mr. and Mrs. Harry Morris, of 2317 Eldridge street, Squirrel Hill.

Mr. Morris

They celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Sunday. Mrs. Morris is 67 and her husband 70. It provided occasion for recollection.

In a Lithuanian village 56 years ago, little Anna Bromofsky went visiting with her mother. She met the neighbor boy. He was Harry Morris. Telling of the occurrence, Morris said he loved her at first sight. He wasn't at all bashful about it, so he told her mother that some day Anna would be his wife.

Six years later they were married. He was 20 and she 17. The following day they sailed for America. After five weeks aboard a sailing vessel they arrived in New York and came at once to Pittsburgh. They have lived here since.

At the wedding anniversary celebration Sunday, their four sons, three daughters and six grandchildren were present.

Convicted of Giving False Testimony

Paul Zagorc, of Pittsburgh, native of Yugoslavia, was convicted yesterday in Federal Court of giving false testimony in obtaining naturalization in 1929. It was testified he concealed the fact that he had once been arrested. He will be sentenced later.

The LUXURY of ROOM

PEOPLE like room. There is no doubt about that. They will pay money to get it, at a hotel, on a ship, in their homes. It is a luxury.

Man likes crowds but hates to be crowded. He wants room — elbow-room — hip-room — leg-room.

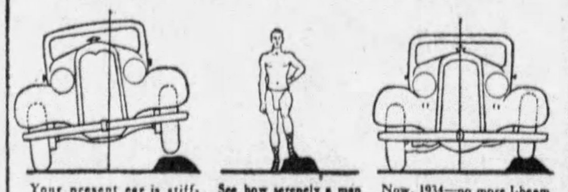
General Motors has designed its entire line for 1934 to provide MORE ROOM. This applies to Chevrolet, Oldsmobile, Pontiac, Buick, La Salle, and Cadillac. More room on the back seat—more length. More room for bags, packages, golf clubs. Room for a child to squirm or for larger persons to shift about.

With this great and simple improvement are combined two others — one which was the outstanding advancement of 1933, Fisher No-Draft Ventilation; and the other, which will be the most-talked-of development in 1934. Engineers give it a very technical name, but we have termed it "giving the car Knee-Action Wheels." If you will look at the diagrams on the right you will understand why we use this simple phrase.

The effect of this revolutionary change is apparent in your first trip; every muscle in your body has a grateful sense of its value.

The bounce and the jar and the bumps — these the soft springs of the Knee-Action Wheels have banished. Shimmy and shake are out of the wheel; the car clutches the road with a faithful grip, and moves with a smoothness beyond belief. The word ride has always connoted a certain degree of unavoidable effort and discomfort. In our 1934 cars you will glide.

HOW KNEE-ACTION WHEELS WORK



Your present car is stiff-legged. An I-beam front axle is joined to the frame by stiff front springs. So when you hit a bump the front of the car bounces, the rear pitches, and you are jarred.

See how serenely a man meets a bump. One knee bends easily, lifting its leg. The other leg is not affected; equilibrium is undisturbed. The knee, not the body, takes the jar.

Now, 1934—no more I-beam axle, no stiff springs. The wheel assembly, flexibly mounted on its own soft spring, rises and falls like a knee to soak up the shocks, while the car glides on.

An interesting booklet is available describing in more detail the fundamental principle of this new, independent front-wheel spring suspension. Simply address General Motors Corporation, New York or Detroit.

WIFE HELPLESS AS MATE DIES ON RACETRACK

As part of the campaign to diminish death and danger on automobile speedways and to make race promoters liable for the care of dependents of those killed on the tracks, there is herewith presented the last of a series of three articles written for the Hearst Newspapers by Mrs. Cliff Bergere, wife of one of the best known drivers in the country. She tells an impressive, dramatic story of what it means to be the wife of a racing driver.

By MRS. CLIFF BERGERE
Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 20—Bravest and most tragic of us all—wives and widows of racing drivers—is one who saw her husband crushed to death on the Spruce Track at Salem — Mrs. Fred Comer, of Los Angeles.

I was seated beside her that terrible day. She laughed and chatted and told us stories about her infant son.

Comer was known among the drivers as "cautions" Comer. He always drove a careful race and took no chances.

The race had only fairly got under way when that most dreadful of sounds rose—the roar of the crowd which always signifies a crackup.

It was Comer and he had crashed in the same spot Cliff had the previous year. Then Jimmy Gleason's car overturned and Jimmy, thrown clear, was lying there on the track facing the onrushing cars with his hands held up as if to ward them off.

We said our prayer as the cars tearing at a speed of 135 miles on hour rushed at him.

ROAR OF THE CROWD

Suddenly there was another roar from the crowd. Dave Evans' car had hit the fence. The entire front axle with wheels attached left the body and came bouncing along the track. Dave was thrown from his car. He rolled over and over like a ball. The other part of the car—with the rear wheels attached—seemed to be pursuing him. Finally he struck dirt on the inside of the track, waved a signal to Mrs. Evans that he was all right and collapsed.

When her husband crashed Mrs. Comer had run to the edge of the track where an official told her that Comer was unhurt.

Then someone told her he was in a hospital in Lawrence, 12 miles away. She drove there. A nurse led her to a doctor.

"Where's Fred?"

Brutally came the stark reply:

"He is dead."

She collapsed.

Left alone with her infant son, Mrs. Comer can never forget Fred and has courageously provided their own living. Her son is now 10 years old—a manly little chap. She has brought him up to remember the father—taken from him by the needless slaughter of the speedways—as the finest man who ever lived.

PATIENT WOMEN

Marion Batten saw her husband's car burst into flames. She nursed him, badly burned, back to health. Mrs. Harry Hartz saw her husband mangled on the track at Salem in 1927. One of his legs was crushed and the scalp was torn from his head. He was in the hospital for months and today gives credit to his wife for his recovery.

Death and injury are not all that a racing driver's wife has to worry about. The drivers are a target for every boy-crazy, hero-worshipping, small-town girl. These girls flock around the tracks trying their best to meet the one of their choice. They write silly mash notes and call by telephone. There are many of us who have encountered these foolish youngsters.

DEATH EVER ALERT

But, as Cliff still insists upon racing once a year at Indianapolis—I, like other wives, have acquired a faith which makes it possible to accept with some degree of fortitude the uncertainties of racing. After a time one finds oneself feeling old and tired.

Too much anticipation and hope, too much disappointment; too much anxiety and resulting relief when our husbands are safe. There comes a time when we try not to feel, not to look ahead.

These boys of ours are so foolish. We know and they know that there is no future in the life of a driver. The prize money is too small and most of it must be spent to keep their cars in condition. Death is ever on the watch for them. Tracks are unsafe. Some promoters are unscrupulous.

We beg them constantly to stop, to get out of the game for their own sake and for ours. Sometimes they promise, but let a race come along and the urge to get out on the track returns and back they go, forgetting their promises.

Someone may ask:

"Well, why do you go to the races when your husband is driving?"

The answer is twofold:

First, they want us there. Second, where is the faithful wife who would not be at his side in time of danger?

THE URGE FOR SPEED

When a wife sees her soldier husband go to war she is upheld by the thought that he is a patriot, fighting for his country. Not so the wife of the racing driver. There is nothing for her to do but face the fact he is deliberately facing death or injury because of that demoniacal urge for speed.

I will never forget a talk I had with the late Fred Wagner, the veteran race starter who died recently from injuries he received on the track.

Said the kindly old gentleman:

"Child, I have been in this game for many years. I know its hardships. Why don't you get that husband of yours out of it? It's a losing game any way you look at it."

How I have tried to heed that advice!

Must I smile until they bring Cliff to me in a coffin?

SPEEDERS DARE DEATH FOR $10

Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 20.—Automobile racers at Ascot Speedway risk life and limb for prize money as low as $10 for first place.

This was disclosed by the official entry blank for the races Sunday, which listed the prize money for the various events.

The blank shows 36½ per cent of the first $5,500 of gate receipts is set aside as the total purse to be divided in the seven events on the program.

Event No. 1, 2 laps, known as helmet dash, paid $50. Event No. 2, paid $15 for first place and $10 for second. Event No. 3, 5 laps, $10 for first place. Event No. 4, 5 laps, $10 for first place. Event No. 5, 100 laps, $570 for first place. Event No. 6, 25 laps, $83.20 for first place. Event No. 7, 5 laps, $18 for first place.

These figures are interesting data in the campaign now being waged to eliminate death hazards from the tracks and require promoters of the racers everywhere to be liable for the care of dependents of those killed or permanently injured in the races.

Loses Cash, Watch After Scorning Red Light

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—If Ben P. Sax, owner of a bakery, hadn't driven through a red traffic light he might be richer by $80 today and still have his $90 wrist watch.

Be that as it may, Sax told police last night that when another automobile forced him to the curb shortly after the red light incident, he assumed it was a police squad car and that he was about to be given a ticket.

But he was wrong. The car contained three bandits who menaced him with guns and made away with his money and watch.

MAJORCA FIGHT EXPLAINED

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—An American woman who called out "ha, you missed me" when an angered member of the Guardia Seville fired into the air, started events leading to arrest of five Americans on the Island of Majorca for assaulting a civil guard several months ago, two San Francisco travelers said today.

The travelers, Mr. and Mrs. M. Eyre Pinckard returned after a year on the Mediterranean Island. They said they were well acquainted with the five Americans, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Lockwood, Walter Blodgett, R. F. Mead and Rutherford Fullerton. They related:

"One of the military police fired a shot into the air. Mrs. Lockwood laughed and called out, 'ha, you missed me.'

"Displeased, the military policeman grabbed Mrs. Lockwood. An American fist landed and the arrests followed."

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

Comedy in the fashion show featuring the Allegheny General Hospital benefit dance last night in the William Penn's Gatterbox was created by evening dresses of about seven years ago.

When debutante Althea Robinson and post-deb Martha Yost appeared in the knee-length gowns of that day with the waistline at the hips, they created the sensation of the evening, and shivers of horror in the hearts of many of their elders who recalled wearing the same style not so many years ago!

The fashion show depicted the fashions worn by American women from Dolly Madison's day to the present graceful (thank goodness) fashions modeled in the show by Collie Jennings and Mrs. William Doolittle.

Historical Fashion Show Features Benefit Ball

Next to the dresses of seven years ago, the most amazing costume was the trailing velvet gown, worn with a green ostrich plumed velvet hat — the smart riding habit of the fashionable horsewoman of the past. Genevieve Bell, member of the Sewickley Hunt, enjoyed modeling this decorative habit worn when women rode only side-saddle.

There were many lovely costumes of the past, a quaint street costume, be-ruffled umbrella and all, worn by Virginia Doyle, and a charming evening gown of Dolly Madison era modeled by Mrs. William D. George. And there were ever so many I just don't have room to mention.

The ball, as you've probably guessed, was a huge success with practically every social registerite family represented—and not infrequently by grandfathers and grandmothers!

Galaxy of Distinctive Gowns Grace Dance

And the gowns worn by the women dancers were lovely. One that might have had its inspiration in the nineteenth century was that worn by petite Evelyn Evans. It was of ashes of roses chiffon-like material, fashioned with slightly diagonal deep ruffles of self-material, decorated here and there with demure velvet bows of matching color. And a huge flat bow of the chiffon was placed on one shoulder.

A pale snap-dragon pink pebble gown, worn by Mrs. Alexander Laughlin Robinson, had quaint epaulettes formed by three rolls of the material. And the hem-line, ending in a slight train, was faced with brown velvet.

Society Hospital Aides Come to See Success

Of course, Mrs. William Christopher Robinson, chairman of the woman's committee of the Allegheny General Hospital, was there, with Mr. Robinson. Mrs. Maitland Alexander, in powder blue, trimmed with grey fox, was taking tickets, with Mrs. T. A. McGinley, in black satin.

Mary Elizabeth Floyd wore poinsettia red lace with a peplum of the lace, Mrs. Blair Childs, bright dark blue crepe with revers of white fur, Mrs. J. Z. Collier was there, Elizabeth Craig with John Chapin, Helen Ruth Deike, Mrs. H. H. McClintic, Jr., Mrs. James O. Flower, the George S. Olivers, Bertha Brooks and debutante Malana Beeson in white crepe.

Margaret Philips was there, Eleanor McKennan in white satin, Virginia Drake in blue bagheera, Frances Johnston, Mrs. W. L. Jones, Jr., Mrs. Carroll P. Davis, Mrs. Harry Darlington, in a green sequin short tunic blouse and a green skirt.

I recall seeing Margaret Rowe, Mrs. Ledlie W. Young, Laura Oliver, Clodagh McCune in white satin, Bettie Guiler in black satin skirt and a silver blouse, Mrs. Lewis A. Park in a jade green chiffon, Mrs. Felix B. Snowden, Mrs. Charles L. Snowden, Mrs. Theodore F. Smith, Rebecca Doyle, Marie Louise Bickford, Jane Sloan, Elizabeth Jenkins and Harriet Fickes.

Mrs. W. C. Robinson, Jr., wore red bagheera with a train, Katharine Dangerfield, black taffeta with white pin dots and two deep flounces of material at the hemline. And others there were Virginia Evans, Sally Jane Fields, Margaret McCready, Mrs. F. G. Gwinner III, Margaret Taylor in white crepe, the junior George L. Craigs, Mrs. B. F. Jones III, the Edwin Rheas, Mrs. George Wilson McKee, Mrs. Harmar D. Denny.

White Yule Trees for Deb Dinner Before Ball

Before the dance, there was a most attractive dinner party, which the William B. Trainers gave in their home for 80 guests in honor of debutante Althea Robinson, daughter of the William Christopher Robinsons, and Constance Drake, debutante daughter of the J. Frank Drakes.

Instead of the usual red and green Christmas decorations, Mrs. Trainer had the many small tables decorated with all-white Christmas trees, which looked silvery in the candlelight. The candles were red, by the way.

The guests were debutantes, post-debs, and representing the older generation were the hosts and the parents of the two honored debutantes.

Debs Trade Traditional White for Deep Colors

Debutantes this year are not wearing the traditional white or pastel shades for their debut gowns, particularly at holiday time when rich, deep colors are particularly appealing.

Jane Kennedy, daughter of the Joseph W. Kennedys, chose purple, a far cry from the demure white gown of the deb of her mother's day, for her coming out party today. Her mother presented her at a luncheon in the family home.

Her gown of violet purple crepe had a deep, high-necked yoke and sleeves of rose crepe—an interesting color combination. But she carried an all-white bouquet—of white lilacs, lilies of the valley and gardenias. Her mother wore black velvet.

Bowls of Christmas red roses and white flowers decorated the home and the luncheon table, too. The debutante, who goes to Vassar, is the second of the group of college buds to come out this week.

Weil. Inauguration of the bureau was undertaken in cooperation with the Pittsburgh Council on Adult Education, local institutions of learning, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. M. and W. H. A. and settlement houses.

Mrs. Weil points out that many men and women are being constantly harassed by requests for speeches before miscellaneous audiences. The new bureau will investigate the organization requesting speakers and combination engagements for out-of-town speakers will also be arranged, thus reducing the expenses of a lecture.

Hobnobbing with royalty! With crowned heads right in the hollow of our hand! That's just where we find ourselves now that we have discovered the new Prince Matchabelli perfume sets.

Remember how up until now you could only get the whole bottle of his perfume . . . at a princely price? That's where this Christmas puts one over on the last ones . . . for these sets consist of three little Matchabelli bottles in a gift box . . . Ave Maria, Princess Marina, and Duchess of York. $5.00. Or you can get any one of them separate for $1.75. Which is worth remembering.

From now on just call us Practical Prue . . . for our mind has turned to the everyday things of life and lo! . . the gift item we have found 'mongst them!

There is a wondrous box of oddments put up specially for the purpose of cleaning your gloves, children . . . and a very nice thought it is! Included is a tube of cream . . . two glove frames, to be bent into the outline of your own paddies . . . a glove stretcher . . . and a trim and tricky little brush (resembling a nail brush). The whole business is $1.00 . . . and we can positively vouch for the fact that these items bought separately would come to many shekels more!

When you see and eat the chocolate covered lollipops which we longed to ram down our throats when we saw them . . . you'll agree that our Christmas garnering of trinkets has not been null and void! These are equally decorative on the tree or in your mouth—big, fat, juicy lollipops covered in chocolate, and with their ends poked into a gaily painted wooden whistle . . . and then the whole done up in cellophane, with Christmas stickers! For stockings . . . place favors at dinner . . . or what have you! 10c each.

Back to the days of Paul Revere we go . . . in spirit anyway, after finding the demure and blushing figurine we did.

This little lady makes one think of Dresden pieces with her Colonial frock of white china. But she's up-to-date in spite of her appearance . . . she's a cigarette container with 4 ash trays tucked under an arm. 69c.

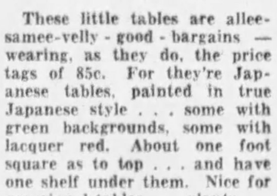
No more burning. . .no scalding from hot steam or water. . . .no wretched pulling and . twisting whilst you gnaw your nails in anguish! This is somebody's brainchild. Every head is automatically insured when given one of these permanents (and if you know anything about insurance, you'll realize that this must mean the wave is GOOD!)

And the "magic"?. . .a magic hand, which combs, rolls, winds your hair all in one motion—bzzt! . . .and you're all ready! Nothing like it ever before. . . .and every woman who has had one is practically flying a flag in enthusiastic applause of it! (P. S. No finger-waving necessary).



These little tables are allee-samee-velly - good - bargains — wearing, as they do, the price tags of 85c. For they're Japanese tables, painted in true Japanese style . . . some with green backgrounds, some with lacquer red. About one foot square as to top . . . and have one shelf under them. Nice for occasional tables . . . plants . . . and so on.

Few households that can't use a set for the buffet . . . especially when the set consists of a smart milkly glass flower or fruit bowl . . . and two candlesticks for only 59c the set!

We just "happened" upon these, and lost no time trekking back with the news. Santa is doing well by us this year

Girl Objects to Attitude Shown Divorced Women

This is for you, Pete, Jack, Bill—
How about Reno-vated ladies?
Do you respect 'em?
Or do you take it for granted that they're tramps and treat 'em accordingly?

Who wants to know? Althea, who shuffled off her wedding ring not long ago—and has about decided that there are no regular Gentlemen left.

My Dear Miss Robinson:

I wonder if you can explain something that is puzzling me? Or if perhaps some of the men will explain it themselves.

I am a divorcee. It isn't my fault. I fell in love with a good-looking man who happened to be fascinating, but no good. I didn't find out about the no-good part until after I had married him. He was a chaser, and he drank. Besides that, he was dishonest.

I stood it for a year, and then went to court and freed myself from him, because I felt that no self-respecting woman should stand for the things he did.

I was very miserable for a long time after the break-up of my marriage. I had had the usual dreams of making a home, of having a fine companionship with my husband, and raising a family. I was so blue and disillusioned and I went home to my folks, and almost went out of circulation.

DIFFERENT ATTITUDE

Then, after about six months, I began to go around again and take an interest in life. I thought I could rebuild things, and perhaps find happiness, after all, in spite of my wretched experience.

I went to a few dances with my brother, and there met some of the boys I had known before my disastrous experience. They "met me with open arms" as the saying is. I was always popular, and several of them asked me out. Also some new men that I met.

But their attitude toward me was totally different from what it had been.

They seemed to look on me as "experienced" and to think that I should be ready to go in for any sort of cheap "affair"—because I had rid myself of a husband that my self-respect wouldn't let me live with. One by one I was compelled to drop them, after having rather ugly arguments.

Why on earth should men take it for granted that they can get fresh with a girl, just because she happens to have been married?

DISILLUSIONED

I have never been wild. I won't be wild now—not if I never go out and never have any friends. For the second time, I am disillusioned and disgusted and deeply hurt.

Have all the men "gone bad" as they grew older? These boys seemed decent enough when I went around with them before my marriage. I wouldn't have suspected them of going in for girls like they seem to think I should be now. I just don't understand it at all.

I wish some of the men who read this column would tell me why I am supposed to be a Ten-Minute Egg, just because I am an Ex-Wife. Why shouldn't I have their respect? I haven't done anything. ALTHEA.

Speak up for yourselves!
Can you explain to the lady?
And you'd better make it good, because we've heard the same story before—and we'd like to know How Come.

Home Wreckers Usually Punished in Kind, Believes Fay King

By FAY KING.

We can enumerate so many cases in which women who have broken up homes in turn had their homes broken.

And because there is even more humiliation in the failure of one of these selfish loves that had defied all barriers, the fight to keep it from crumpling into a heap is even more bitter.

But just as the secret glee betrayed the denials of its beginning, so does the hollow hopeless expression of its failure betray the denials that it has failed.

It is only when they in turn suffer the pain they once caused others that they realize their own selfish cruelty.

And they have no reason to expect in their turn any of the consideration that they should have felt and did not.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Depending on Lay Remedies

Often the doctor hears a worried mother say, "My child needs a 'worm powder.' He grits his teeth in his sleep and does not gain weight. My neighbor says those are sure signs of worms."

Dr. Copeland

I am sorry to say in many an instance the child is given the worm medicine without the expected result. This form of home treatment delays the visit to the doctor. This is a pity, because undoubtedly he would have discovered that the child had no worms, but was the victim of something more serious.

Do not be misled by well-meaning lay friends who seek to prescribe for your child. Vague symptoms—and usually the symptoms are vague—do not provide a sufficient reason for giving worm remedies.

The only symptom that is really dependable is evidence of the worms or the eggs of worms. Bear in mind that restlessness and gritting of the teeth may be no more than signs that the child has gone to bed too tired.

If the youngster complains of discomfort around the navel, colicky pain and nausea, the presence of worms should be suspected.

Round worms are the most common type found in children. They are as large as the ordinary earth worm and easily discovered.

The pinworm is another common worm. It is white, thread-like and less than one-half inch long.

If worms are actually discovered the child should be given worm medicine. But, as I have said, it is always advisable to consult a physician first. He will prescribe the necessary medicine and give it in the accurate dosage. Then there will be an escape from the careless handling and untrained prescribing of home remedies.

Hookworm must not be confused with round worm. Hookworm is spread from one person to another by dirt and contaminated water. The victim of hookworm complains of extreme lassitude, undernourishment and in many instances, suffers from a serious anemia.

Hookworm is more difficult to get rid of than simple round worms. Hygienic measures have greatly decreased this affliction, which in former years was extremely common.

Children should be protected against worms. Care in the choice and preparation of foods will go far to give safety. In case of infection there should be prompt treatment.

Given in Marriage

A Sequel to Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Young People Get Their Cues in 'War'

The four earnest young faces looking at me took on, as one, a look of grim determination, as I voiced my request concerning Avis Arlen. There was also sardonic mischief in each pair of eyes, and my fear suddenly found itself calmed. They were so efficient and enthusiastic a group that I felt Avis would have to pit more than even her unusual cunning and effrontery against their united front.

"Let's be sure that we have it straight," Ronald said quietly. "From the second Avis lands here, until Noel and Mary are safely started on their trip. Avis is not to see Noel alone. Is that it?"

"Precisely," I returned, and then Bob interposed, with a thought evidently born of past experiences of his own:

"But Mrs. Graham, suppose she should be brash enough to ask Noel to speak to him alone. It's hard for a man to be rude to a girl, and Noel's so polite—"

"That's just where I expect you four to function expertly and efficiently," I told them smiling. "I know of no four young people who possess more imagination, ingenuity and resourcefulness. I am counting upon you, although, of course, the older people are also going to be on guard. But we shall have so many other distractions that our chief dependence must be on you four."

"Aunt Madge!"

Marion stopped abruptly as she uttered my name, and I smiled encouragingly at her.

"Yes, dear, what is it?"

"Don't you think we ought to tell Bill and Hank about this, too?"

DOUBTFUL ABOUT HANK

A ready affirmative was upon my lips, then memory of the summer came to me, and I hedged.

"Bill, surely. Tell him everything, and emphasize that I asked you to tell him about it. But I am not so sure of Henry's discretion."

"It isn't his discretion that's likely to be wobbly, but his heart," Carolyn put in pertly. "If you remember that party last summer, dear Avis put quite a dent in young Hank. It's the surest thing you know that if other chances fail, she'll sink the talons into Hank and make a little messenger boy out of him."

"There's a remedy for that right in your hands, Carol," Bob told her with a grin. "Of course, my heart's going to break while you're applying the lotion, but what's a little sacrifice like that for the good of the cause?"

"I don't know what you mean," Carolyn said with dignity, but flushed cheeks.

"Oh, yes you do!" Ronald chimed in with brotherly frankness. "We all could see last summer that Hank wouldn't have looked at Avis if you had given him any time. But when Bob grabbed your time, and Avis, finding nobody else handy, made a play for Hank, his little preparatory school heart fell for her hard."

"Meouw, meouw," Carolyn retorted promptly. "You've been so long out of boarding school yourself, it's a wonder you know how a boy from one feels."

FEIGNED ADMIRATION

Ronald loftily ignored this thrust at his status as a fledgling Yale sophomore.

"Nevertheless, that's your especial job," he said. "Mrs. Graham will decide how much we'd better tell Hank, but it will be your job to keep him so interested that he won't come to heel when Avis beckons him."

"That's oke by me," Carolyn capitulated suddenly. "How much shall I tell Hank, Auntie Madge?"

"Whatever you think best for him to know; nothing, or much," I decided quickly.

"All right, I'll take over that little job," Carolyn said. "But just let me hand you boys a hot tip," she went on. "There's only one way to keep Avis away from Noel, and that's for both of you to give her such a rush that she'll think she's dishing Marion and me. A good mess of tripe, but if Marion can stand it, I can; so from the time Avis gets here, you can spell each other in giving imitations of being sunk without a trace of her charms."

"You're crazy!" Bob and Ronald said in a breath. "We can't do it."

"You mean you won't," Carolyn told them sweetly. "But you're going to. There's only one thing I'm asking."

"What's that?" Bob asked sulkily.

"As soon as Mary goes, and the opportunity's right, I want to drop a hint to La Belle Arlen as to the real reason for her sudden popularity."

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Accepting a Paying Penalty

Writers on Bridge have always stressed the fact that it is often wise to accept a sacrifice, even as many as three tricks not vulnerable, rather than permit opponents to make a game. Smaller penalties are wise to prevent opponents from making a vulnerable part-score. In Rubber Bridge the gains made by taking such sacrifices are invisible. In Duplicate, however, with the values of vulnerable and non-vulnerable part-scores fully understood by the players, it is comparatively easy to determine just how far a player can go in the way of taking the sacrifice and profit thereby.

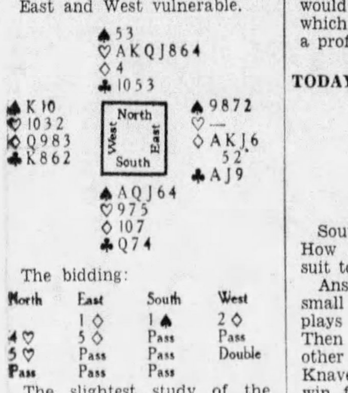
East, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
	1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ◇
4 ♡	5 ◇	Pass	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

The slightest study of the hand reveals that East and West, vulnerable, can make their contract of five diamonds. At Duplicate the value of a vulnerable game is 500 points, plus the score for tricks actually made. Thus the value of a game to East and West in this situation is 600 points. Against this, North can count the practical certainty that he must take at least 7 tricks in his own hand. His partner has made a bid and his hand should furnish one or more tricks in consequence. Therefore the bid of five hearts should be made on the hand, in Duplicate and in Rubber play as well, as North would be entitled to count on his partner for a trick even though he had at no time entered the bidding. The cases in which the South hand would be absolutely trickless, even if South had not bid, would not be as numerous as those in which it would afford at least one trick, which would make the sacrifice a profitable one.

TODAY'S QUESTION

South is playing notrumps. How should he play the club suit to the best advantage?

Answer—South should lead a small one to North, and if West plays small, finesse the nine. Then on regaining the lead another small one and finesse the Knave. By so playing he will win four tricks in the suit if West holds Ace-Queen-Ten or Queen-Ten-small.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Silver Wedding Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Can you advise me as to an appropriate twenty-fifth wedding anniversary gift, aside from the usual sterling silver?

I had in mind pieces of glassware, with sterling silver decorations and mountings. Can you please tell me if that would be appropriate? F.

So many people are not enthusiastic about silver decoration on glassware that I don't believe that I would send this, if I were you.

As a matter of fact, nowadays there isn't such a struggle to send gifts for anniversaries that are definitely symbolic of the anniversaries. It isn't, therefore, at all necessary for you to send silver for the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. If you wish to send glass, I suggest that you send plain glass, without the silver decoration or mounting.

Sympathy Note

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a girl of 20 and I would like to know whether or not I should send a card or flowers to my boy friend's mother who has undergone an operation and is now in the hospital? I go out with this young man about once in two weeks, but as yet have never met his mother.

Please tell me what would be most appropriate to send. I am undecided because I have never met her. Z.

If you are sure that the young man's mother knows about you enough to identify your name on your card, I think it would be a most pleasant and gracious and thoughtful thing for you to send a box of flowers to her at the hospital. And on your card a friendly message, or a note of wishes for her early recovery.

R. S. V. P.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have received an invitation to a wedding and reception. In the lower left corner there appears "R. s. v. p" Would appreciate it very much if you will be kind enough to tell me the exact form and wording that should be used in my reply? D.

A very important acknowledgment this, one that has to be worded most punctiliously, according to a set form. The invitation to the church ceremony doesn't need an acknowledgment, but the reception invitation does.

On our very best paper, white or just off-white, and double-sheeted, we write, on the first page, our acceptance, like this:

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Dewing accept with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. (Bride's Parents)'s kind invitation for Tuesday, the first of January, at five o'clock

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

The winner for the informal evening costume is a suit of lustrous black satin with a waistcoat blouse of white satin having a double-breasted effect marked by rhinestone and black enamel buttons. The long sleeves of the jacket are finished with matching rhinestone and enamel links.

The woman in white is very important this season, since the all-white evening costume is part of the exclusive mode. A lovely ensemble has a dress of white and silver lame with a bolero of ermine worked in horizontal and vertical lines. Seamed detail marks the slim dress.

FUR COATS FOR CHRISTMAS

The raglan sleeve is again smart, and this Somali leopard swagger coat has them. Scarf and revers are nutria.

Beautifully cut and sewed kidskins make this youthful coat. The nun's collar unbuttons and can be used as a separate cape.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

IT WILL not be fashionable to give gold pieces this winter, but paper checks from doting cousins, uncles and aunts—not to mention parents and husbands—will probably be just as popular as ever, for Christmas stocking stuffing.

It is a wise woman who takes advantage of the considerate prices of good fur coats this year, and uses her gift money to get one. Rumor has it that all fur prices will jump up a lot next year, and as a 35 per cent leap has already been lept, there is probably some fire behind the smoke.

WHAT IS A good fur coat, the sort to gather in as an investment? The best answer to that is what any reliable furrier tells you, for fine furs are a study that the layman knows but little of, and dreadful are the disappointments of women who pick a coat for its cut and becomingness alone.

To be the best in its class, a fur coat does not have to flaunt a prohibitive price tag, experts tell us. There is a coat for every pocket book considering such a purchase, and the stunt is to get the best fur on the market for the hundred-and-fifty or the five-thousand dollars that is set aside for it.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

It is not wise to wear the same shoes all day. A change is restful, and it is a good plan to have shoes of various shapes and designs so that pressure is not always in the same spots.

Blackheads are more numerous on the nose than elsewhere. The whyfore is that there's where the soiled pad gets in its dirty work. Always the nose gets the biggest share of the dull finish.

Be careful when pressing out blackheads—cover the fingers with soft gauze—and when opening pustules. Harsh treatment that causes an abrasion will produce a scar which often can be removed only by means of surgery. At the drug store, you can purchase an extractor which makes a neat job without causing surface wounds.

Household Hints

Artichokes of the globe variety are sometimes difficult to clean because of their tightly folded leaves. To free the globes of any insects, first wash them thoroughly in cold water. Then soak them for half an hour to 40 minutes in cold water to which a teaspoon of vinegar has been added. Finally rinse them in clean water and place them end upwards in a colander to drain.

Cretonne sunshades can be laundered to look like new. Open the sunshade, moisten it with warm, soapy water, and beginning at the top and working to the edge, gently scrub the material with a nail brush and soap. Use clean water, adding salt to brighten the colors, for removing the soap.

Miss Moore Reserves Time To Visit Husband

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 20.—Add Colleen Moore to the feminine stars whose contracts guarantee them time off to be just a wife.

Profiting by her MGM experience which kept her idle on the coast for so long, Colleen had made RKO put in writing that she can go back to New York for three months as soon as she finishes "Success Story."

She did it so she can spend part of the year with Al Scott, her broker husband, whose business keeps him in the East.

Miss Moore

Colleen is now the third star to retain this right for commuting love. Irene Dunne recently won RKO'S permission to live in New York and to receive two weeks' notice on her pictures. Aline MacMahon long has had an agreement with Warner Brothers that she can fly back East at regular intervals to visit her architect husband, Clarence Stein.

The big question in Hollywood these days is whether Greta Garbo's romance, or friendship, with Rouben Mammoulian will be the final means of bringing the Swedish star out of her seclusion.

For the second time in a week, Greta dined in public last Friday. She and Mammoulian occupied an unobtrusive table at the Russian Eagle Cafe, colorful rendezvous which is guarded by a tall doorman in Cossack uniform.

And this is not all. The Swedish star attended both previews of her new picture, "Queen Christina." If you don't think that a concession, it was the first time that La Garbo had seen one of her own previews since the silent days.

The ruby and diamond ring that Mae Clarke has been wearing really was intended as a Christmas present from Sidney Blackmer. When it arrived early, Sidney was so excited that he couldn't wait.

Now, however, it has been rewrapped and Mae won't get it officially until Christmas. Even then, she denies it will seal an engagement.

"I'm going to wear it on my left finger," said Mae yesterday between scenes for "It Happened One Day."

Upon opening a box from South America last week, John Barrymore was shocked to come upon two shrunken and mummified human heads. Once, when he was on a trip, the star tried to buy some of these gruesome souvenirs from an Indian tribe. One of the natives was willing but wanted a rifle in trade. John gave him the gun. That was two years ago.

Why, shudders Barrymore, was he so long in filling the order?

To keep the ice from melting, they put a cloth on it. Carole, who was working in a black silk negligee, came in, thought the ice was a box and sat down . . . The Joe E. Browns are having a party today to celebrate their youngest's first birthday. Then, on Christmas Eve, they'll have another party to celebrate their nineteenth wedding anniversary . . . Will Rogers' daughter, Mary, has been dancing at the Hotel Miramar with Henry Willson . . . Vann Harding has more than 300 candid camera snapshots of Leslie Howard . . . It will be a Christmas trip to David City, Neb., for Ruth Etting . . . You should see W. C. Fields delicately crook his little finger to take his first sip of coffee.

Journey's Endless

THEY CALLED him professor. Prof. Simon Burke. He wasn't really a professor. But he taught history in high school for so many years that the title came to him as naturally as the snowy goatee which drooped from his chin.

He had lived, as Leonard Lyons can tell you, in or near Chicago all of his life. And when I say "all of his life" I mean a long time, because Prof. Simon Burke was by no means a young man. Looking at him hurrying along the street with his brief case clutched against his side, you might mistake him for a banker on his way to a conference.

But Burke was an honest man. And, by the same token, a poor one . . .

In his youth he had been idealistic. He wanted to teach, not merely for money, but for the sheer joy of educating the future greats and near greats. He loved it. Loved it almost as passionately as he did paintings. His life was really divided between the two.

He was still quite young when he came home breathless one day to his mother. He couldn't wait to take off his hat and coat before telling her the news.

"I've seen it!" he shouted. "Mother, I've seen it. The finest copy in America!" Then, in a reverent tone; "'Whistler's Mother'!"

His mother pretended to be interested. She tried to be, but it was no go. She couldn't become excited over a painting, even though it was a world-famous masterpiece.

"Some day," Simon concluded, "I will see the original in Paris."

In that moment a great desire was born. A desire which was to endure through the years; through joy and disappointment; through happiness and death. A desire to see the original "Whistler's Mother."

So Simon Burke saved his pennies. He had a small salary, but it was adequate. He had never married, and had only his mother to consider. So he found that he could put aside a little bit each week.

And some years later, he discovered that he had enough for a cheap rate fare to Europe and return. With enough left over to live modesty in Paris for a week or two while he visited the Louvre to drink his fill of beauty.

So he went. Two weeks after he left Chicago he was in London. He visited the famous galleries there, and prepared to take the Channel boat to France two days later. But he never got that far. Those sudden, stabbing pains in the side turned out to be appendicitis.

And, a little more than two months later, he was back in Chicago, tired and broke.

Simon Burke was a pretty good sport about it, though.

"This hard luck," he told his mother, "only makes me the more determined to see 'Whistler's Mother.' Now I know I'll see it—some day . . ."

He began to save again. It was slow, tedious. But he did it. And, despite the fact that now and then he received a setback, he was ready to visit Paris Louvre again exactly 11 summers later.

Simon Burke wasn't young any more. But his heart was light and gay the day he boarded the train in Chicago, and bade his mother goodby. This time, he felt secure. He had had his disappointment and it was past. Now, he felt, he was glad of that disappointment. He would relish the treat that much more, now.

When he felt French soil beneath his feet, Simon Burke grinned like one of his own schoolboys on Saturday. But the grin faded that night in the little French Hotel when he read the cablegram.

"Must return at once. Mother extremely ill." . . .

She died before he reached Chicago. All he saw when he got there was a cemetery with a lot of green grass and some brown earth, freshly turned.

Then he became afraid. Afraid that death would come to him, too, before he could glimpse the divinely inspired masterpiece.

So he determined to try once more. One more effort to defy fate. One more chance to walk into the Louvre. To stand in reverent awe before the dream of his life: "Whistler's Mother."

He saved harder than ever. He denied himself the barest luxuries. He moved to cheaper quarters. He did proof reading for a publisher at night. He was near his goal when a huge pay cut went through. And shortly afterward there was no pay at all.

But Simon Burke merely smiled grimly at the news and plugged onward. He took on more and more work at night, laboring far after midnight to make a little more money. Health, to him, became cheap. It was a race aganst time.

Early this Summer he reached his goal. He counted the money and found it was barely enough. He engaged cheap passage, left Chicago, and started for Europe the third and final time. He no longer trusted himself to reach his goal, even when the boat docked in France.

But this time, he made no stops. He went straight to Paris by express. He stayed at a small hotel that night, not sleeping lest something happen to keep him from reaching the Louvre. But his fears were foolish.

He was standing at the entrance when it opened in the morning. And, carefully removing his hat, he walked inside. His pulses pounded in mighty victory; his heart sang with joy. His listless feet shuffled happily over the stone floor as he passed row after row of beautiful paintings.

Finally he came to the aisle where the catalogue directed him. Simon Burke's face was wreathed in smiles, and his eyes sparkled with moisture. He looked happily at the spot where "Whistler's Mother" was marked.

It was empty. He kept himself from fainting, and asked, in bad French, where the coveted masterpiece was. The guard was very polite.

"Please to not be excited," he said. "You look sick, M'sieu. 'Whistler's Mother' is not here, it has been sent to the World's Fair—in Chicago.". . .

DOG DIES, HURTS MAN IN LEAP

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Forty-pound dog, falling 10 stories from a roof, crashed onto the head of Albert E. Barrett, 46, of Morristown, N. J.

Barrett, traffic manager for the New York Telephone Company, was taken to a hospital where it is feared his skull is fractured.

The dog, "Tell," a year-old setter, was so seriously injured he was executed. For six months, since William Giebe, superintendent of the building, got the dog, it had played on the roof with Giebe's son, William John, 8.

While the lad was at school yesterday the dog chewed himself free from his harness in a kennel 30 feet from the roof edge and then leaped or fell. Giebe suggested the dog may have been chasing a bird.

COURT DELAYS O'DUFFY RULE

DUBLIN, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Despite strong protests from General Eoin O'Duffy's counsel, action on the habeas corpus application of the blue-shirted co-leader of the United Ireland party was delayed until tomorrow after a hearing in the High Court today.

The hearing was held on an application made in the form of a motion for the issue of an absolute writ of habeas corpus in the cases of both O'Duffy and Captain Sullivan, one of three men arrested with him after a clash between police and O'Duffy's followers at Westport, Mayo, Sunday night.

Today's court proceedings brought to a new peak of public interest the battle raging in the Irish Free State over the right of the jailed general's followers to wear their blue shirts, symbol of their anti-DeValera movement.

DOCTOR'S VOW SAVES BABY

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The tragic experience of a Kentucky doctor when he lost his own baby 25 years ago enabled him to save the life of a friend's child.

He is Dr. Thomas L. Higginbotham of Louisville. A quarter of a century ago he was powerless to save his baby, dying in infancy with an acute tonsil infection.

As he watched his baby die, the doctor determined to develop a technique for removal of tonsils from babies, suffering with high fever. A nurse who had watched the case knew his resolve. She is now Mrs. John C. Ingram of New York. Last week her baby fell ill. The family physician dared not operate and she telephoned Dr. Higginbotham, who flew to New York.

At 1:30 a. m. he operated and the fever dropped. Last night the baby gurgled a healthy gurgle.

SPORTS COMMENT

By JAMES J. LONG

Figures Show Pitt Power. ♦ Cochrane Explains Trade.
Weisenbaugh Best Gainer. | Lions Real Easterners.
Dukes Strong on Defense. | Overthrow of Greenleaf.

PANTHERS OUTRUSH OPPOSITION THREE TO ONE

Nothing else tells the story of the strength of the 1933 Pitt football team so well as the cold figures just released by W. S. Croasmun, Pittsburgh's official gridiron statistician. In nine games, the Panther ball carriers on running plays outrushed the opposition 1,986 yards to 598, or better than three to one. In passing, the Sutherlands outgained their foes, 603 yards to 408. And as to the Pitt defense, only two teams, Wash.-Jeff and Minnesota, were able to gain more than 100 yards on the Panthers by rushing the ball. The Gophers gained 119 yards and the Presidents 108.

Heinie Weisenbaugh

Among the Pitt ball carriers, Heinie Weisenbaugh led the individual ground-gainers in average length of gains, averaging 6.3 yards per attempt, or 465 yards in 74 tries. He was followed by Mike Sebastian with 4.4, or 421 yards in 94 attempts. Howdy O'Dell made 490 yards in 118 efforts, an average of 4.1, and Izzy Weinstock carried the ball 104 times for 394 yards, an average of 3.8. Dick Matesic made 113 yards in 38 carries; Hub Randour, 100 in 20; Leon Shedlosky, 59 in 20, and Mike Nicksick, 48 in 25.

Counting Weisenbaugh as a second-stringer—and what a second-stringer—the Pitt reserve backs outscored the regulars, 74 points to 71.

DUKES PRESENT SECOND BEST DEFENSE

Duquesne made the second best defensive showing against the Panthers, holding them to 157 yards on rushes and 43 on passes, and being surpassed only by Minnesota. The Dukes also had the second poorest offensive mark, gaining only 30 yards on rushes and 54 on passes. Centre gained 56 on passing but not a yard on rushing.

Individually, among Pitt's opponents, it was none of the highly-touted stars who had the greatest success at poking his nose through the Panther line. Instead, it was Bill King, of W. & J., who caused the Sutherlands the most trouble. That Ellwood City fullback, the loss of whose services after the Pitt game was a hard blow to the Presidents, gained a total of 87 yards in 17 rushes against the Blue and Gold, an average of 5.1. That was better than the combined rushing gains of all the Duke and Nebraska backs, and just five yards short of Notre Dame's rushing total for the day. And in the Minnesota game, Julius Alphonse gave Pitt more trouble than did the famous Pug Lund, gaining 67 yards in 16 rushes, an average of 4.1.

COSLIN TAKEN FOR AGGRESSIVENESS AND PUNCH

With many fans still wondering why Mickey Cochrane, in making his first trade as manager of the Tigers, swapped a comparative youth like Jonathan Stone for a veteran of 32 years like Goose Goslin, the new Detroit skipper offers the explanation that he did it with a view of getting immediate results. For years the Tiger policy has been to build for the future, but the goal remained in the distance. Cochrane wants to get something at once, and he sees Goslin as a better bet than Stone for that purpose, though in length of future service it is admitted that Washington got the edge in the deal.

Goose Goslin

It is Cochrane's aim to get aggressiveness and punch on his club, and he holds the view that Goslin carries both, while Stone carries either. Goslin always has been among the American League leaders at driving in runs, and Stone never attained any prominence in that respect. Goslin has the reputation of being a "winning" ball player, whereas Stone has been kept out of that classification by a listless makeup and a lack of aggressiveness.

MOST COLUMBIA PLAYERS ARE EASTERNERS

While the right of Columbia to be ranked as the East's best college football team is open to question, there can be no doubt that the eleven facing Stanford at Pasadena on New Year's Day will be truly representative of this part of the country in the matter of birth or residence. All but two of the active players on the Lion squad are bonafide Easterners.

No fewer than 10 of Lou Little's gridders are Pennsylvanians, and one is a West Virginian. The other Eastern members reside in New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Connecticut and Washington, D. C. And Pittsburgh and vicinity play a strong part in the makeup of the regular team that will start the Rose Bowl game, for even though Tackle Paul Ferraca, of this city, may not play, there are Cliff Montgomery, captain and quarterback, of Natrona Heights, and Tackle Paul Lackel, of McKeesport. Too, there is a Pittsburgher even on the coaching staff, for George McBride, backfield coach and former Georgetown University player, is a resident of this city. Another player, Nevel, comes from Altoona, and a fourth Pennsylvania regular is Ed Brominski, of Swoyerville.

GREENLEAF'S FALL ONE OF BIGGEST UPSETS

Even in a year that has been one of unparalleled disaster to sports champions, the fall of Ralph Greenleaf from the world pocket billiard throne in the present title tournament in Chicago, is viewed as one of the most surprising upsets in the history of cue competition. No matter what might be happening to champions in other fields, followers of pocket billiards had considered Greenleaf as one titleholder whose honors were safe. They figured him to be so far superior to all contemporary pocket specialists that he could not fail to retain his crown. Even now they are unwilling to admit that Ponzi, Caras or anybody else can be rated a greater player than Greenleaf, insisting that because of domestic worries or some other reason the old champion was off his game. He lost seven out of nine.

Ralph Greenleaf

Greenleaf had held the world championship so often and so long that he appeared to be in a class of his own. He won it first in 1919 at the age of 19, and repeated yearly until May, 1926, when it passed to Frank Taberski. Greenleaf regained it the following fall, but lost it to Erwin Rudolph in a challenge match in January, 1927. He won it back in 1928, lost it to Taberski again in December of that year, recovered it in a play-off game with Rudolph following the next tournament and had held it ever since. Greenleaf, on December 16, 1929, established a world record run of 126 in competition, and also holds a record of 265 for an exhibition run.

Regular backs of the Columbia University Lions, now en route to Pasadena to play Stanford in the Rose Bowl feature on New Year's Day. Capt. Montgomery is a former Har-Brack High School star whose home is in Natrona Heights. He is rated as one of the best backs in the East this year and was named on all-star teams. COLUMBIA GRID STARS DRILL IN ST. LOUIS

By BILL CORUM
International News Service.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 20.—As you read this, the Columbia University football team, headed for either roses or thorns in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, on January 1, will be working out in the stadium of the Washington University Pikers, out here where the Southwest begins.

I suppose you know how the athletic teams of Washington U., which boasts one of the great medical schools of the United States, came to be known as the Pikers. The university was built on the grounds of the World Fair of 1904. And the playground of the World Fair of 1904 was the Pike. Then came the Pikers. Just as out of that other World Fair in Chicago in the, they tell me, gay 90's, Amos Alonzo Stagg became the "Grand Old Man of the Midway" at Chicago University.

So the roaming Lions of Morningside are taking their first light practice en route to the Coast after as enthusiastic a sendoff last night in New York as any football team ever got in history. Mayor John P. O'Brien not only came to bid the boys farewell, but also brought the Police Department Band and Glee Club along, stayed for 40 minutes himself, and left them pleased and proud when he said goodby.

STANFORD TOO BIG?

Now I have been reading here and there that Stanford was much too big for our Roaring Lions, and that the game was a mismatch and all that. So no sooner did I get myself settled on the train than I looked up Charley Barrett, better known as the Old Doc, to ask him about that. I thought maybe the boys were right, and I know the Old Doc, who has been training football teams for 35 years, would know. He said:

"Too big, too big? Why, Bill, they can't build football teams too big for a good, fast, well-coached outfit. Don't you know that the bigger they are the harder they fall?

MONTGOMERY LAUDED

"You remember Benny Boynton, the Waco Whirlwind that made the All-America even though playing at Williams some 12 or 15 years back? I always thought he was the best quarterback I ever saw on a football field until this kid, Cliff Montgomery, came along. Now I'm not so sure. Monty is smart, and he can go to town with that old apple. You just have to go for him. He's got so much of what it takes."

Local Mermaids In Miami Meet

Lenore Kight and Johanna Gorman, Homestead swimmers, will leave tomorrow to participate in a series of exhibitions at the Miami-Biltmore Hotel during the Christmas holidays. Miss Kight is the National and Olympic free style champion while Miss Gorman is the National Junior backstroke champion. They will return on January 3.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Charley Massera, of Monongahela, Pa., may never be a champion of the world, but today he can tap his chest and say:

"I beat a titleholder."

He got the decision over Maxie Rosenbloom at the end of 10 rounds last night. No harm came to Roosenbloom's 175-pound crown since the match was an overweight affair. Massera weighed 182 pounds, Rosenbloom 181.

Johnny Marto, the referee, awarded victory to Massera when the judges, Charley Lynch and Billy Dunn, disagreed.

Massera's final rallies caught the crowd. He forced Rosenbloom all over the ring in an effort to bring him down. He almost accomplished his purpose in the final chukker, a right to the jaw staggering Rosenbloom backward clear across the ring.

Rosenbloom had to hold to save himself. He was a 2-to-1 shot at the start, but when he seemed to be getting the worst of it in the first two or three rounds the odds went to 5 to 1.

Massera kept whaling away at Maxie's ribs with a right and old Slapsie was turkey red around that sector. These body blows forced Rosenbloom to hold considerably and the clients chided him for it.

Massera took plenty of jabs in the face while trying to land a knockout in the eighth. He carried that sort of punch, yet could not register, Slapsie's defensive art being what it is.

Massera kept Rosenbloom on the ropes a lot in the ninth, rushing and fighting in a determined rally. He brought yelps from the crowd once when he fought so hard that Rosenbloom could not escape from the ropes against which he had been punched.

Phils Get Jeffries, Bluege for Koenig

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The Philadelphia National League club announced today it has acquired Otto Bluege, shortstop, and Irvine Jeffries, second baseman, from Cincinnati in a trade for Mark Koenig, second baseman, who recenttly came to the Phils.

Koenig was part of the deal for Chuck Klein, who went to the Chicago Cubs for cash and also Harvey Hendrick, infielder, and Ted Kleinhans, pitcher.

Wagner, Benswanger Speak at Knoxville

It was pep night in the club rooms of the Men's Club of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, at Knoxville, last night, with the Rev. Dr. Kempster acting the role of master of ceremonies.

The fun started with a dart ball match, and at its conclusion, after an extra inning game, Rev. Kempster called upon William E. Benswanger, president of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club, Honus Wagner, Rosy Rowswell, Lute Boone and Bob Garland for speeches.

SMITH-YAROSZ STATE TITLE GO PLANNED

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Finals of Metropolitan A. A. U. championship tournament, Madison Square Garden, New York.
Freddie Miller vs. Sammy Levine, 10 rounds, Chicago.
Johnny Mitchell vs. Varias Milling, 6 rounds, Chicago.

The principals will be Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, holder of the title, accorded him by some strange line of reasoning when he defeated Vince Dundee, a resident of New Jersey, in their Battle of the Twenty-One Grand at Forbes Field, and Jimmy Smith, of Philadelphia, who last Friday night, at the Arena, defeated Young Terry, of Trenton, N. J., after the latter had grabbed a win over Yarosz in Newark, N. J.

Lew Raymond, matchmaker of the Arena Boxing Club, is dickering for the bout, which he plans to stage in either Motor Square Garden or Duquesne Garden. It was he who brought Smith here for his melee with Terry.

A double windup has been arranged for the Moose Temple, downtown, on Christmas afternoon, next Monday. It will feature Petey Sarron, of Washington, against Mose Butch, and Anson Green, Homestead Negro middleweight, against Walter Kirkwood, stablemate of Sarron, in twin 10-rounders. Dominic Mancini will be a principal in one of the three six-round preliminaries.

SONNENBERG IN DRAW

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—(INS.)—Gus Sonnenberg, the Boston mat ace, and Jack Smith, of Chicago, grappled to a draw decision here last night. A flying tackle by Smith carried both out of the ring and neither could continue after the plunge.

Wife Denies Babe Ruth Will Ask for Release

NEWW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—A report that Babe Ruth would ask for his release from the New York Yankees to devote all of his time to teaching youngsters the game was emphatically denied today by Mrs. Ruth.

The Babe himself was not available, but Mrs. Ruth said any report that he was planning to retire from active play was not so. She said:

"The Babe has a contract to make some broadcasts this winter, but that will be all over before he goes south to begin training, and there isn't a chance that he'll retire.

"The Babe is doing the broadcasts because he believes he can stimulate interest in the game among the youngsters. I'm not familiar with all the details of the plan, but it won't keep him from playing."

TO SPONSOR BOYS' CLUB

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The Inquirer says Babe Ruth is going to ask for his release from the New York Yankees so that he will be free to take over the "Babe Ruth Boys' Club," a project backed by a New York oil company.

All the plans have not yet been worked out, the paper says, but it is understood both the films and radio will have a place in the Babe's plan to teach baseball to the youngsters throughout the nation.

TOMMY ACCEPTS BOUT TERMS

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Tommy Loughran, former light heavyweight champion, has accepted the challenger's end of 12½ per cent for a heavyweight title match with Primo Carnera in Miami February 22, Madison Square Garden announced yesterday.

JONES TACKLES GARIBALDI

With a match against Jim Londos, the champion, promised the winner, Gino Garibaldi, of Italy, and Paul Jones, of Texas, go to the mat in the main bout of the third wrestling show of the Olympic A. C., in Motor Square Garden tonight.

Hans Kampfer

The bout marks Garibaldi's third straight appearance in a windup here this season. Jones also has been on the previous cards, but in a preliminary role.

Two German grapplers are in the preliminaries tonight, Hans Kampfer against Floyd Marshall, of California, in the semi-final, and Hans Baur against Little Beaver, the Cherokee Indian.

In the other bout, Ivan Vakturoff, the Russian, meets Orville Brown, of Baltimore. The first bout is slated for 8:30 o'clock.

The Arena, on the North Side, plans to hold its second wrestling show next week. It is trying to change its night from Friday to Thursday in order to bring in Big Jim Browning that night. Browning on Monday night wrestled an hour and 40 minutes to a draw with Ed Don George in New York's Madison Square Garden. If Motor Square Garden runs a show next week, Thursday night will not be available to the Arena, and new plans will have to be made.

LOCAL PASSERS ROUT ASHLAND BY 52-30

By JESS CARVER

The Dukes got a scare and their second basketball victory of the campaign last night as they massaged the Ashland College, out of Ohio, basketeers with a 52-to-30 lacing in the Bluff gymnasium.

The visitors came here unheralded, and for the first seven or eight minutes of the action appeared to be the real McCoy. They were tall and rangy and comparatively fast, but as it turned out, they were only fair ball handlers and more or less inaccurate marksmen. The speedy and well-drilled Dukes were too fast, too smart and too clever and as a result they turned what started out to be a close ball game into a rout before half time and continued the carnage during the second period.

DUKES SCORE HEAVILY

Twenty-one field goals, the same number that were recorded against Waynesburg in the season's opener last Friday night, flew from the accurate hands of the Dukes, and the home lads made good on 10 out of 14 attempts at the charity line. Ashland contributed 10 field buckets and as many fouls, but missed 13 which, had they been sunk, would have made the score look a sight more respectable.

At that, the visitors stepped out to a 5-to-1 lead on a field goal by Shaffer and three foul shots by Boyer. A minute later, the Dukes were out in front by a point, an advantage they quickly improved upon. At the end of the half, the home boys were setting a merry pace, leading by 28 to 11 and the ball game was "in."

In the second period, the visitors managed to ring up 19 points, but at no time did they threaten to overtake the flying Dukes. The Ohioans continued to dog 'em at the foul line and missed plenty from close to the hoop, shots that were hurried in their execution by Duquesne's tight defense.

Art Feldman, steady as usual, and Bill Murphy tied for the scoring honors with a dozen points each. Clelan, towering Ashland center, contributed nine points to his team's total.

Another of the new group of officials, Harold Allison, former Allegheny College star, made his debut before a Pittsburgh audience as referee and handled the contest in fine fashion. He worked with Howdy Campbell, of Geneva. The lineup:

Duquesne.	G.	F.	Pt.	Ashland.	G.	F.	Pt.

SPORT VIGNETTES

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

The Boston Red Sox are not putting all of their money into players. They are spending $750,000 to fix up their baseball park to accommodate the crowds they think their New Deal for the fans will produce.

Original plans called for the expenditure of $350,000 to renovate the park, but Owner Tom Yawkey discarded them to do a complete job at a cost of more than twice as much.

One of the features of the change will be a press room for reporters where they can retire to write their stories after the game.

"Layden One of Seven Four Horsemen to Succeed as Coach," says a headline. How many Four Horsemen were there?

Ever hear how the Four Horsemen got their name? Well, good old Grantland Rice gave it to them the day they defeated the Army in New York in 1924.

"Outlined against a blue-gray October sky, the Four Horsemen rode again.

"In dramatic lore they are known as Famine, Pestilence, Destruction and Death. These are only aliases. Their real names are Stuhldreher, Miller, Crowley and Layden. They formed the crest of the South Bend cyclone before which another fighting Army team was swept over the precipice at the Polo Grounds this afternoon as 55,000 spectators peered down upon the bewildering panorama spread out on the green plain below."

It was Warren Brown, of Chicago, who first referred to Notre Dame's starting eleven as the Shock Troops.

Harry Pollock, old-time boxing and other sports promoter and one-time manager of Young Corbett and Freddie Welsh, shocked his many friends by shooting himself the other day. He never appeared to be the sort of a fellow who would take the easy way out.

If you've already done your Christmas shopping you can begin to count the days before the Rose Bowl game and set your watch by them.

An amateur boxing show, some pretty fair wrestling bouts and a touch of good old hurling (that Irish game in which the boys beat each other over the head with clubs) were added entertainment features as the Yellow Jackets took undisputed possession of first place in the North American Professional Lacrosse Association race by defeating the Buffalo Indians, 17 to 10, before a crowd of at least 1,500 at Motor Square Garden last night.

Today the Jackets, boasting three straight victories, left on their first road trip of the season. They are to meet the Indians in Buffalo tomorrow night, and will oppose the Maple Leafs in Toronto Saturday before returning to take on the Milwaukee Bruins here New Year's night.

CONTEST ROUGH

The boxing and wrestlinb bouts, numbering about one dozen and two score, respectively, were savage, bitterly contested affairs despite the fact that they were impromptu numbers put on by the players during the game. At one time, in the fourth period, the battle almost got out of Referee E. A. Corey's hands when the gladiators provided a new high for this kind of recreation by slamming each other over the head with their heavy sticks.

Scarcely a Jacket escaped without a black eye, skinned nose or scalp wound as the Indians (of the Seneca and Huron tribes) wielded their sticks much after the manner in which their ancestors had wielded their tomahawks. The redskins, too, were far from unmarked at the finish, Young Deer, their fast farword, was the No. 1 casualty. He was carried from the court with a badly wrenched back in the second period, and was unable to return to the fray.

The Indians provided by far the stiffest, as well as the roughest, opposition the Jackets yet have met. The first period ended in a deadlock, 3-3, and it was not until the second quarter was some five minutes old that the locals were able to pull away and pile up a lead.

LAFRANCE STARS

The fierce battle brought out very clearly the fact that Harry LaFrance is just about the best, as well as the fastest, forward known to the game, and that both he and Bruce Cordick, Pittsburgh goalie, are at their best when the going is roughest.

The Blue Shirts and the Orange Shirts, two teams made up of Negro lads, entertained with "kitchen lacrosse" between periods. They were armed with brooms, with which they swung tirelessly at a football as they played to a 1-1 tie.

It was announced that a reduction in prices would become effective on January 1. The lineup:

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: 2,500 MILES IN A PAPER BOAT—This curious craft, made entirely of compressed paper, was 17 feet long, 25 inches wide and weighed 55 pounds. It was named the "Qui Vive" and was propelled by a paper paddle. Its owner and builder, Tanneguy de Wogan, of Paris, covered 2,500 miles in it on river and sea, traveling from Paris to the Gulf of Lions, on the Seine, Yonne, Canal of Bourgogne, the Saone and the Rhone in 1884. The following year the trip led to the Swiss Lakes, the Italian Lakes, the Danube, the Rhine and the Meuse. Then, in Holland, the paper canoeist ventured out into the open sea, touching the coasts of Belgium and France as far as Havre. Throughout the 2,500-mile trip the frail craft served perfectly, causing no loss of time for repairs or reconditioning. A CHIPPER OLDSTER—Horace E. Clough is one of the last four Civil War veterans of the Vermont Soldiers' Home at Bennington, Vt., where there originally were 1,064 of them. Although he is 91 years old, he still starts his day by leaping out of bed and touching his palms on the floor several times in succession without bending his knees. With a memory as alert as his joints are supple, he still can name every one of the 101 men who served in his company, close to seven decades ago. Clough regards the World War veterans with amused condescension, believing that modern warfare tends to "sissify" its combatants.

TOMORROW: A HEROIC DIAMOND WEDDING.

BAILEY SHOWS STEADY GAIN

International News Service.

BOSTON, Dec. 20.—Showing steady improvement after twice dragging himself from the brink of death by sheer courage and stamina, Irvin (Ace) Bailey, young Canadian hockey flash suffering from a fractured skull, today appeared to have won his heroic fight for life.

An air of optimism pervaded City Hospital where Bailey, right winger of the Toronto Maple Leafs, has lain at death's door since a week ago last night when he was crashed to the ice by Eddie Shore, Boston defense ace.

Although still on the danger list, Bailey was thought to have passed the crisis. He was sleeping normally today. He spent a comfortable night and has shown steady improvement, according to word from the sick room.

Meanwhile, Shore has retired from hockey indefinitely. Suffering mental and physical anguish over the tragic collision with Bailey, he has requested Charles F. Adams, president of the Bruins, for permission to leave the city and take a long rest.

Mrs. Bailey today receives $6,642.22, the receipts of the game last night between the Bruins and Montreal Maroons. The Bruins won, 1 to 0, in an overtime game that lacked lustre.

MONTREAL, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The indefinite suspension of Reginald (Red) Horner, defense star of the Toronto Maple Leafs, of the National Hockey League, who was set down for his part in the Bailey incident at Boston, today was set to end December 31 by Frank Patrick, managing director of the league.

SWISSVALE'S CARD SET

By JULIUS LEVIN

Two new opponents are included in the tough nine-game schedule arranged for the 1934 Swissvale High School eleven. They are Etna, which will be played in a night game at Etna on September 21, and Munhall, which will sponsor football after discontinuing the sport for a season. Munhall will be tackled at Swissvale on October 20.

The two schools dropped are Bell Township, of Salina, and Rankin High School, coached by Jock Rosenberg.

Six of the nine games already slated will be class A opponents, two with class B rivals and one with a class AA team. The nine games already booked follow:

September 21—Etna, at Etna (night game).
September 29—Homestead, at home.
October 6—Arnold, at Arnold.
October 12—Avalon, at Avalon.
October 20—Duquesne, at home.
October 27—Munhall, at home.
November 3—Wilkinsburg, at Wilkinsburg.
November 10—Braddock, at Braddock.
November 16—Edgewood, at Edgewood.

Teams interested in arranging a game away from home on September 15 are asked to call or write Ed Paulie, Swissvale High School.

Bobby Angelo, coach at Stowe Township High School, has two dates open on his 1934 schedule for class A games. The open dates are September 28 or 29 and November 9 or 10. Call Federal 1114.

Howard Harpster, football coach at Carnegie Tech, will be the principal speaker at the annual banquet to be given the members of the Charleroi High School squad at Charleroi tonight. The Cougars are members of the class AA division of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League.

The high school passers staged another heavy schedule of battles yesterday afternoon and last night. In one of the outstanding games, the Langley quintet defeated Sewickley, 43 to 40, after two extra periods of play.

In other contests, Rankin defeated Derry, 36 to 15; Aliquippa took over Sharon, 31 to 23; Leetsdale defeated Monaca, 28 to 13; Dormont beat Allegheny Vocational, 32 to 17; Allderdice nosed out Homestead, 27 to 23; New Brighton downed Beaver, 36 to 15; Crafton took Oakdale with ease, 44 to 10; Ambridge defeated Butler, 28 to 22, and Brentwood downed Mt. Lebanon, 25 to 24, in somewhat of an upset.

SENATORS TOP LEAGUE IN FIELDING

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Along with turning in the top team batting average, Joe Cronin's Washington Senators played the best defensive baseball in winning the American League championship last season.

Led by Cronin himself, who dominated the shortstops with an average of .960, the Senators, as a club, fielded for .979, only a point shy of the world record mark set by the Philadelphia Athletics in 1932. St. Louis, which improved its average 6 points over its 1932 performance, landed second with .976.

Another Senator, young Joe Kuhel, topped the regular first basemen with .996, and averaged about 10 chances per game. Hank Greenberg, Detroit's first-sacker, also cut in for some of the honors by accomplishing two unassisted doubleplays in one game to equal a record. Greenberg's feat was achieved against St. Louis, September 3.

KAMM SETS RECORD

Willie Kamm, of Cleveland, again became the leading third baseman after a two-year lapse, and set a new world mark of .984. Art Scharein, of St. Louis, tied the major league record for third basemen in assists, making nine against Boston, May 5.

Mervyn Shea, the St. Louis Brown's regular catcher, who will be with the Chicago White Sox next season, played through his first 96 games without an error and finished the season with a leading percentage of .996. He made only two misplays all seaso. Frank Pytlak, Cleveland's tiny receiver, played 69 games without an error, but was outranked by Shea, who worked in 101 games.

SIMMONS STARS

The record percentage for American League outfielders of .996, set by Sam West, of St. Louis, in 1928, was equaled by Dick Porter, of Cleveland, and Al Simmons brought attention to himself for two outstanding plays. He made a double play unassisted, and in a game with Detroit on August 13, made two remarkable throws to prevent scores. Rogell and White attempted to score from second base on successive long singles, but Simmons' arm nailed them both at the plate.

Clint Brown and Wes Ferrell, both of Cleveland, head a list of 19 pitchers who made no errors. Brown had 11 putouts and 53 assists, while Ferrell handled 60 chances, 12 putouts and 48 assists.

Grove City Five Gets Close Win

GROVE CITY, Pa., Dec. 20.—A pair of sensational goals in the closing moments of play by White Horse Deems, veteran guard, enabled the Grove City College basketball varsity to defeat the crack Youngstown City College quintet, 30 to 29, here last night.

Grove City led, 21 to 14, at half time, but the visitors rallied in the second half, and with only two minutes left to play, held the lead. The lineup:

Chillysauce

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

There is just one man in the U. S. A. capable of running the new Cincinnati Reds, provided the task is as tough as it was painted at the Chicago meetings. His name is Gen. Johnson, and after the NRA skipper gets through with Henry Ford and the Weirton Steel mess he might slip down the Ohio and do his stuff.

Donie Bush is said to have written his resignation about five minutes after the new ownership came into being in Redland. Donie knew all about the situation and refused to be drawn into the picture, although he could have remained at the helm of the so-called big-league team. Donie will work under ideal conditions at Minneapolis where Mike Kelly holds forth. When you realize that Bush doesn't even bother about a contract at Minneapolis you will appreciate his feelings toward Kelly; if he does sign one it will be merely a matter of form.

Anyhow, the immediate future of the Reds is not so hot. You can bet your bottom dollar the fans of Cincy will fill every seat at Redland Field on opening day, but just as soon as the Reds settle around the bottom, the customers will stay away in big bunches.

Charles (Galli Curci) Grimm was in fine form at the midwinter meetings. It was the first time I have seen the funny fellow acting his natural self since he became manager of the Bruins. It appears that some very serious person informed Lefty he would have to become very serious just as soon as the managerial toga fell upon his shoulders. Now that might be a fine idea in the breach, but in the observance it didn't click. In the 1932 World Series, Chas was serious and his team was very funny. Perhaps if he returns to his normal funny self, his team may also act natural.

Grimm gave a 3 o'clock tea to something like 50 of his friends at the Cubs' headquarters at the Palmer House. It was noted that Galli Curci did not once partake of any refreshments as he poured, but he was funnier than a combination of Will Rogers and Leon Errol—and that is quite a bit South in being funny.

SQUADS NAMED FOR SOCCER FEATURE

By TOM BIRKS

Twenty-six of the best players in Western Pennsylvania have been selected to participate in the third annual American-born vs. foreign-born soccer game, scheduled for Greenlee Field on New Year's Day.

The cup committee of the local governing body, under President Doig, spent long hours selecting the players.

Johnny Jaap will lead the foreign team, which is composed of Adam Miller and Tennyson, of Clan Douglas; Scheidle, Frey and Oswald, of Ambridge; Kirk, of Curry; Duff and Eicher, of Arsenal; Clifford, of Union Switch; Borowsky, of the Tuscans, and Corrigan, of Aliquippa.

Buff Donnelli will lead the homebreds in seeking their third straight victory. It looks to be a good club defensively, and there appears to be plenty of scoring power in the forward line. Morgan heads the list with four players, George Dresmich, Dante Villani, Dave Matthews and Felix Mitchell; Van Jurs, of Moon Run; Chappell, A. Urbanic and Johnny McCosky, of Heidelberg; Zip Zywan, of the Reihls; Behling and Gene Cherokee, of Cecil, and Mark Molly, of Curry, complete the squad.

WATSON VICTOR

LONDON, Dec. 20.—(Universal.)—Seaman Watson, British featherweight champion, unleashed a knockout punch in the tenth round of a scheduled 15-round bout in Olympia Stadium last night to defeat Dave Crowley. Watson substituted for Al Brown, the world champion.

DUKES SCORE EASY WIN

Year's Day in Miami against the University of Miamia Hurricanes. The squad will be dismissed for a two-day holiday Saturday, but will report back to Coaches Layden and Bach Tuesday for further work.

Reports from Miami that Bob Zuppke, famous Illinois mentor, is aiding Coach McCann, of Miami in preparing the Hurricanes for the invasion of the Dukes has not added much to the confidence of the Bluffites. Zuppke knows the Notre Dame system from A to Z and will be of invaluable aid to the Southerners.

All-America Joe Skladany, end; Mike Sebastian, halfback, and Frank Walton, tackle, all of Pitt, left last night for Chicago, where today they will join the All-Eastern grid squad selected by Coach Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, and Andy Kerr, of Colgate, and proceed to San Francisco, for the annual Shriners' benefit game New Year's Day.

It took a rally in the last five minutes of play to bring the victory to the Fintex five. The attack was led by Bobby Smith, former Tech star, who accounted for 15 points.

PROTEST AVERY STOCK OPTION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Chairman Fletcher of the Senate Banking Committee turned over to Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, for investigation today a complaint from a Montgomery, Ward & Co. stockholder against the option granted to Sewell L. Avery, president of the company, to purchase its stock.

The stockholder, Charles H. MacDonald, suggested an inquiry by the committee of the legality of the option given Avery to purchase 100,000 shares of the company stock at $11 a share.

He contended the option had been granted without consent of the majority of stockholders.

In addition, MacDonald said, Avery gets a salary of $100,000 a year and is provided with a limousine and chauffeur although the company lost 15 million dollars in 1931 and 1932.

NRA Court Test Looms In Near Future

By GEORGE H. SNYDER
Business Editor.

THE DISPUTE BETWEEN the Weirton Steel Company, subsidiary of National Steel, and the Labor Board raises the possibility that the constitutionality of some of the provisions of the National Recovery Act may be tested in the courts.

Whether or not some of the NRA provisions would stand up before the Supreme Court has been the subject of widespread discussion since the administration launched the New Deal.

In the past, it has been rather obvious that the administration wished to avoid a test in the courts, at least until the program was launched and was beginning to function. Patriotic motives on the part of industrial leaders also tended to defer court tests of the National Industrial Recovery Act even in cases where certain provisions were found to be particularly distasteful.

Public Opinion Prevents Contest

WITH PUBLIC OPINION strong on the side of the administration's plans, some industrialists also hesitated to defy the NRA because of the general condemnation which probably would have followed such a stand a few months ago; Henry Ford's refusal to sign a code represented the first serious attempt on the part of a national organization to buck the NRA. The administration avoided a legal contest with Ford and went so far as to back down in the fight over Ford's right to bid on government contracts.

The National Steel Corporation's tiff with the Labor Board represents the second crises in the dictatorship of the NRA. Up to last night, it appeared that the administration intended to let the dispute go into the courts and to take a chance on the constitutionality of the National Industrial Recovery Act. Of course, it is impossible to predict at present whether either side actually will call the other's bluff and undergo the risk and trouble of a protracted legal dispute.

Fight Might Be Risked at Present

WHILE THE administration did not wish to have the NRA plan embroiled in legal difficulties during its early stages, it is possible that it would not be so opposed to such a contest at present. Sufficient time has elapsed to complete the more important industrial codes and to get nearly all industry in operation under the new conditions.

Any contests which might go to the courts at present would be isolated cases and would not necessarily disrupt the entire NRA scheme. In addition, the time needed to carry a test case through the lower courts and the Supreme Court would be so great that, by the time a final decision would be handed down, business either would be so far on the road to recovery that the NRA would no longer be needed, or else the plan would have shown itself to be ineffective.

In either event, a court fight over the NRA would not be as dangerous at present as it would have been a few months ago.

STOCKS BREAK UNDER SELLING AVALANCHE

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Stocks broke sharply today under a selling avalanche that swept quoted values down 1 to as much as 9 points.

The relapse followed pronounced weakness of Union Bag and Paper, which dropped 9 when it was reported the Stock Exchange authorities were inquiring into the recent activity in the issue. Liquidation by nervous traders, in addition to increased short operations, unsettled the list and at one time the ticker tape lagged some four minutes behind floor transactions.

With the gold price again unchanged, the dollar advanced about 5 cents in terms of sterling and nearly 1-10 of a cent in relation to the French franc. Wheat yielded more than 2 cents a bushel and other commodities were hesitant. Bonds were irregular.

The slump in shares came just befort noon and for about 25 minutes offerings flooded the market. Support then appeared and there were recoveries of 1 to 3 points in some groups.

The recent gyrations of certain stock specialties were watched with considerable trepidation by brokerage circles. Some commission men feared that the undue activity of these issues, including sharp slumps of Union Bag and Atlas Tack, might renew agitation for federal regulation of stock exchanges.

At the same time various financial quarters were not too pessimistic over the possibility of government control of speculation. These pointed out that many brokers for some time have barely been paying expenses, largely because of the falling off of commissions due to the lack of public participation. With so-called "pools" restricted by the government, it was argued, the public might take a more lively interest under the assumption of federal protection.

Preliminary estimates of car loadings for the week ending December 16, to be reported Friday, indicate an expansion of the aggregate to around 550,000. Such an increase, it is said, would be counter seasonal. A year ago the drop for the corresponding week amounted to some 4,000 cars. The first eight carriers to report showed an increase in own line loadings of 5.8 per cent.

WHEAT SLIDES ON CROP NEWS

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—Downturns of grain prices formed the rule early today, influenced by somewhat bearish aspects of the United States government crop report.

A small increase of the prospective wheat yield was indicated. Opening 1/8 to 7/8 lower, wheat afterward held near the initial limits. Corn started unchanged to 1/4 off, and subsequently altered little.

Transient price rallies in wheat and other grains later were associated with the fact that although the government crop report showed a somewhat larger wheat total than the previous official estimate, the loss, compared with last year, was large. In corn, as well as in wheat, the government report pointed to a small increase of the crop total, but was far below that of the previous year.

Oats averaged lower with corn and wheat. Provisions were easy in the absence of any aggressive demand.

Christmas Shopping Active

By B. C. FORBES

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING is brisk. Buying is somewhat less so.

Useful gifts are in most demand. This is in keeping with the times.

Mr. Forbes

Even so, luxuries and novelties are not neglected. Many people feel as one woman expressed it:

"I never give friends things they would buy themselves. And I like to get things I would not buy."

Christmas, in other words, is a season for indulging in possessions outside of the commonplace.

When total sales are footed up, it probably will be found that improved sentiment prevailing this year has been reflected in Christmas shopping.

A SUGAR MAN tells me that there has been endless flopping and floundering at Washington over an NRA code. He declares that one after another has been placed in charge—without tangible result.

YEARS AGO, the percentage of impurity in different brands of nationally-known chocolate candies was published. One high-priced brand, popularly supposed to be the best, was found to be about the poorest, while one of the cheapest was found the purest. The effect of this disclosure was instantaneous and emphatic.

Why don't the authorities follow a similar policy in regard to liquor? If certain highly-regarded brands are fraudulent, why shouldn't the public be told the truth?

Publicity is the best policeman, the most drastic punishment of all.

F. H. JOHNSTON, president of a card system, chatting with the writer, expressed sentiments which, happily, are now very largely typical of prevailing sentiment among business executives. He said:

"The great news today is that confidence is coming back, and money is circulating. People are being put to work, goods are being bought, debts are being paid. And the farmer is feeling better.

"Recovery must come through expansion of private enterprise. If there ever was a time during the past three years for private enterprise to take advantage of improving conditions, that day has arrived.

"What business needed was a little more money and some confidence. The money is here —and confidence is growing daily."

R. E. POWERS, rubber trader, sends this column this suggestion:

"Let every man and woman who is back of President Roosevelt send him a letter or card before Christmas or New Year, expressing goodwill.

"This would be one of the finest gifts our leader in this grave emergency could ask. Think of the vast cheer, encouragement and strength it might bring to him in his terrific struggle with the forces now surrounding us."

I have found that the biggest and busiest of men appreciate recognition when they achieve something worth while. After all, what can match realization that one's efforts are appreciated by one's fellowmen?

OPERATOR 13

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

The girl was a dead weight in his arms now, her blood-smeared face deathly white, her head with its disordered curls and sagging bandanna rolling helplessly on his shoulder at every stride.

The station house had been burned to the ground. Nobody guarded the ruins. But there was a light in the adjacent tower, where the bell ringer kept watch beside his fire bell. Gailliard shouted up to him, and he looked over into the street and came down presently.

"What are ye up to down here, sergeant?" he demanded. "Is this young thing dead?"

"No, exhausted. Where can I take her?"

"Cameron's men are burned out," said the bell ringer. "They're barracked in the Cinthral office. But can ye walk that far with the poor child in yer arms?"

"Is there a hack to be had?"

"Sure, Danny Whaley has a hack at Dominick and Hudson. Tell him th' ould bell ringer of Greenwich street sent ye."

Effective Password

At Dominick and Hudson streets lived Mr. Whaley. He had just driven in from Trinity with his ancient hack when John Gailliard appeared and hailed him in the name of "th' ould bell ringer of Greenwich street."

"Sure, that's mesilf,' purred the old Irishman. An' where will I be drivin' ye wid th' poor lass in yer arms, sor?"

"Drive," said the Confederate spy, "to the new police headquarters, 300 Mulberry street."

As the hack drove up to the Central Station and John Gailliard got out with Operator 13 asleep in his arms, Commissioner Acton, who was just coming out, glanced at the burden that this seeming cavalry sergeant was carrying.

"Is this child dead?" he asked; then recognizing the girl: "What has happened to her, sergeant?"

"Certainly." Acton told the clerk, who was following, to get a police sedan and bearers to carry the young lady to the matron's quarters. "And send a doctor up at once!" he called after him. And to Gailliard, again: "She isn't wounded, is she?"

"No, sir. Just exhausted. I reck—I guess."

"Where did you find her, sergeant?"

"Near the ruins of the Eighteenth Precinct Station, sir. She was with the military, and tried to arrest a notorious rebel named Gailliard, I understand. He got away from her in Greenwich street; when I found her she was too exhausted to tell me more than this."

Two policemen came with a sedan; Gailliard placed the girl in it. Then he calmly stooped and kissed her.

"Goodness me," said Mr. Action, "is she a relative?"

"Ask her, sir, when she wakes up," said the boy, with a grin.

The next instant there came an outcrash of drums, and he saluted and was gone, engulfed by the crowds that were frantically greeting the arrival of the First Guard Regiment back from Gettysburg.

But Operator 13 slept on.

At midnight, amid the flames of the burning city, rattle of musketry and roar of mobs, one of the New York City regiments—the famous Seventh—arrived from Pennsylvania, landed at the foot of Canal street and marched immediately to Broadway. Two other regiments had preceded it by an hour or two. Others followed.

Sound Asleep

At 300 Mulberry street, the girl he loved to dream about was sleeping the sleep of absolute exhaustion. Not even the perpetual racket of musketry, the shocking detonatin of field artillery, and the brazen drums of constantly arriving regiments could arouse her.

It was Thursday noon when the matron awoke Operator 13, gave her a bath and breakfast and sent a hack to St. George's Place for her baggage. She was sitting by the window when Inspector Carpenter came in with a telegram and a letter.

"Are you quite recovered, ma'am?" he inquired politely.

"Quite, thank you."

He bowed and went out, and she opened the telegram:

"Your record is excellent, with Miss Quilter and Miss West in jail, and Andrews and Cleburne dead. Keep after Gailliard.

"SHARPE."

She opened the letter:

"A line would reach me through Gaston at Richmond. Just a line, please, to say you are well and that, in the future, you are going to remain on your own side of Dixie. "J. G."

By 2 o'clock her baggage had arrived. She dressed in a bewitching summer gown of pink organdie and a small straw hat, trimmed with wild roses, slanting coquettishly over one ear. She carried a pink handkerchief, pocketbook and parasol to match. Her cheeks were pink, also.

She was standing by an open window looking down at the thousands of refugees swarming in yard and street below, who had fled to the Central Office to escape violence and death. She could hear the distant sound of fire bells, of musketry, of cannon. The blue sky was still befouled by smoke and the air stank of it.

A Question Answered

Commissioner Acton came in, presently, haggard, but polite, "No ill effects, ma'am?" he inquired.

"None, thank you. But how did I get here, Mr. Acton?"

"Why," he said smilingly, "your — relative, I presume, brought you in."

The girl's eyes sought the outer sunshine. A slight blush glowed in her cheeks. "My lover," she said, naively.

"Really, ma'am! I hope he may be in no danger today."

"I hope not."

The commissioner said pleasantly: "Our Metropolitan and the soldiers are getting the better of the mob. Expect it will all be over by tomorrow. But I advise you not to go outdoors so charmingly dressed, ma'am."

"Could I drive to the ferry, Mr. Acton? I must go to Baltimore at once."

"Well, yes," he replied; "we could send some cavalry with you."

So it happened; and at 2 o'clock Operator 13, and her pale pink dress and hat, and carrying her pink parasol and pocketbook drove across to the ferry surrounded by a company of blue-jacketed cavalry. And before the cars left she telegraphed to Col. Sharpe:

"He is on his way South and I am after him."

When the Negro porter came to her to announce that she had half an hour for supper in the Philadelphia station restaurant her pretty pink handkerchief was all crumpled up and wet with tears.

PRESIDENTS JAMES MADISON AND JAMES MONROE

President Madison's administration (1809-1817) was marked by the British American war (1812-1815), which disclosed loose ties between the various parts of the country. Lack of National currency (1811-1816), and of transportation facilities (roads, canals, bridges, ships), the dumping of British goods, threatening to kill American industry in infancy, brought about diverging interests between industrial East, cotton growing South and agricultural West (rising sectionalism).

In the election of 1816, James Monroe won the presidency (1817-1825). The Missouri Compromise (1820) establishing 36° 30' North Latitude as the border line between the free and slave territories yet unorganized between the Mississippi and the Rocky Mountains, appeased temporarily the violent controversy about slavery. President Monroe declared his Doctrine in 1823 to keep foreign nations from expanding possessions on the American Continent. (U. S. History.)

KING ALFRED IN THE MONASTERY SCHOOL

Alfred, King of the West Saxons, (871-901) scholar, educator and lawgiver, warred continuously against Danes, Swedes and Norwegians, still barbaric Teuton tribes. These tribes raided the Western coasts of Europe, the last great migration of the Teutonic race. They discovered Iceland, Greenland, visited even North America (Vikings.)

Rollo, a chieftain of the Northmen, established himself in today's Normandy (911) embracing Christianity. His successors were destined to rule over England. (World History.)

CLARA BARTON, AMERICA'S GREATEST HEROINE (1821-1912)

The creed of this little volunteer nurse fulfilled Tennyson's standard: "The creed of creeds—The loveliness of perfect deeds." The words written on her tombstone (North Oxford, Mass.) should be engraved also in our hearts: "Angel of the battlefield. Civil War 1861-1865; Franco-Prussian war 1870-1871. Spanish-American War 1898. Organizer and president of the American Red Cross." (Character-Building.)

BLINDED BY FAULTY DIET

This baby lost his eyesight due to xerophthalmia, ulcer of the eye, caused by diet of skimmed milk and cereals, lacking vitamin A (fat soluble), one of the seven known (A-G). Vitamins are dietary essentials (chemical composition unknown) necessary for constructive phases of protoplasmic activity manifested in growth and maintenance of health.

SECTION OF CORLISS STEAM ENGINE CYLINDER

DIAGRAM OF THE PROCESS OF BLEACHING VEGETABLE FIBER

Cotton, linen, woodpulp, may be bleached (made whiter) by saturating them (after preliminary treatment) with a solution of sodium hypochlorite (NaOCl), and then passing them into a bath of diluted mineral acid, which liberates hypochlorous acid (HClO), the bleaching agent, and chlorine. The excess of chlorine is removed by a solution of sodium sulphite, called antichlor. The bleaching is done by evolved (nascent) oxygen changing colored matter into colorless oxides.

Wine Is Still a Mocker

All the wine experts are rushing into print with advice on what to do until the doctor arrives.

It's strange because our aggravated census for 1932 showed absolutely no wine experts either at liberty or jugged. There were some consulting technicians in paints, oils and varnishes. And a few highly paid diagnosticians who could decipher the malady but couldn't locate it.

It's our guess that the wine experts of 1933 are the home-brewers of 1932. They came out of the cellar, blinked once and took charge of the situation.

Rather than have you experiment with strange herbs and roots we will tell you that wine is divided into three kinds. Dry, sparkling and sweet.

If you have a well-located table you serve the dry with the fish or before you catch it. Sparkling wine is served with spinach, but never mixed. The sweet variety goes well with the mashed potatoes, stuffed cucumbers and parsnips.

You serve wine in a glass. It is not a gravy. Some people talk about ham in champagne sauce with mushrooms. But the best way is a spoonful every hour. Gradually working up to a ladle.

All wines are subject to individual taste. But this is not a wine drinking nation. We prefer beer until exhausted.

All the European propagandists will try to maks us imbibe wine until we hear the tender chirrupings of woodland flutes and the fluttering of pixies in the tall grass. But the sauternes and the Rhine wines are feeble nectars for the sturdy citizen who was raised on the white mule of the Carolinas and nourished by the apple jack of New Jersey. That's too much like sending your grandpappy back to kindergarden.

The wines of California are as good as any in the world. That state has the grapes, the sunshine and the water. Some years ago it made its grapes into bricks. Now, we are ready for mortar by the hod.

We intend to drink domestic wines for patriotism and fall with our face toward the foe. After all, the idea of repeal was revenue for America. The government has an interest in every barrel. It takes the tax and the hoops and the consumer grabs the staves and the contents.

Disguised Saloons

Some of the So-Called 'Clubs' Continue to Present the Worst Evils of the Liquor Traffic.

Hundreds of clubs in Allegheny County have been licensed to sell liquor.

In Pittsburgh the licensed clubs are more than twice as numerous as the licensed hotels and restaurants combined.

A Sun-Telegraph investigator reports that many of these so-called "clubs" are establishments that operated as speakeasies during prohibition.

They are not clubs at all in the legitimate sense of the word. They are simply disguised saloons, catering to the general public.

These places continue to present the worst evils of the liquor traffic, and should be put out of business.

It is gratifying to learn that agents of the Department of Justice are investigating them.

If the proprietors of the "clubs" are found to have criminal records, their licenses will be revoked.

Even though no evidence of criminality should be discovered, the licenses should be revoked if investigation discloses that calling the places "clubs" is a mere shallow pretense, and that the selling of liquor is their only excuse for existence.

More States Ratify

Reflecting Public Sentiment, West Virginia, Minnesota And Maine Approve Child Labor Ban.

All honor to West Virginia, Minnesota and Maine—seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth among the states of the Union to give their legislative consent to the ratification of the proposed Child Labor Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

By the terms of this amendment as proposed to the states, Congress would be given the power to regulate the employment of all persons under 18 years of age.

This simply means that Congress could go to the protection of all the children of school age in this country, by forbidding their employment under conditions that would deprive them of their growth or of that schooling which is the birthright of every American.

Congress submitted the Child Labor Amendment to the states in 1924. Special interests fought its ratification in every state. Before the beginning of the current year only six states had consented to its ratification.

During 1933 13 additional states have been added to the honor roll of ratifying states, and there is a good chance that the amendment, which has now passed the half-way mark toward ratification, will win the approval of several other states in the last days of the old year.

Pennsylvania now has an opportunity to get its name on the honor roll. The Child Labor Amendment is before the Legislature and would have been ratified before this but for the obstructive tactics of the Republican State Organization.

It has passed the House of the Missouri Legislature and awaits action by the Senate. It is pending in the Wyoming Legislature.

What happened in West Virginia, Minnesota and Maine proves that public sentiment is strongly on the side of giving to the children of the United States the protection of the Federal Constitution.

A prominent citizen of West Virginia requested the Senate of that state to postpone the vote until he could appear and argue against the ratification of the amendment.

The answer of West Virginia, Minnesota and Maine to this able argument was a vote in favor of ratification. This should be the answer in every state and it will be when the organized forces of public sentiment are brought to bear on timid or tardy Legislatures.

Lock Your Car

The Highway Patrol's Experience Indicates There Is Little Danger of Theft If Autos Are Locked.

The State Highway Patrol reports that it has recovered 506 stolen motor vehicles since the first of the year. It does not state how many it failed to recover. But the figures suggest that the number of automobile thefts is staggering.

Capt. Wilson C. Price, superintendent of the Highway Patrol, says that in the 10 years that it has been operating none of its cars or motorcycles has been stolen, and he calculates that thieves had at least 1,460,000 chances.

The highway patrolmen always lock their machines when they leave them. The distributor rotors are removed from motorcycles.

There is a lesson in this for all motorists.

A Wise Decision

It Is Not Desirable That Billboards Should Be Erected On School Property.

The Board of Public Education has reached a wise decision in deciding not to allow school property, not even vacant property, to be used for the erection of advertising billboards.

In the interest of civic beauty it is desirable that there shall be no great increase in the number of billboards in Pittsburgh.

The Civic Club deserves credit, by the way, for its fight against political posters. They were very little in evidence in the recent campaign.

Dry Those Tears

Christmas Tree Custom Permits Thinning Out of Excessively Dense Thickets.

It is customary, at this season, for editorial writers to bemoan the annual slaughter of young firs and spruces for Christmas trees.

Much of this agony, however, can be spared, according to White Mountain Christmas tree traders, who are taking the trouble to tie tags on Christmas trees explaining a few things that may not have occurred to the rest of us.

"The cutting is not destructive," says the tag, "but gave room for neighboring trees to grow faster and better."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—There are varied gradations of the celebrity chaser in Manhattan—from the gawking autograph seeker to self exploiters who gather the famous at teas. Hollywood does not hold a candle to the New York flame to be seen "with people who matter."

The minute head-lines proclaim a new unusual the chase is on. All the ingenious devices to meet them is put in motion. The most highly sought in the past year was Noel Coward. He lapped it up kitten-cream fashion for a time, but it finally made him a recluse with a phone dead to incoming calls.

Social climbers are most persistent of the pack. They try to use celebrities as stepping stones for ascent to the heights. To flaunt them at a ringside supper club table or A on the aisle at first nights become an obsession. And highly amusing.

About the only celebrity eluding them is Lindbergh. It's difficult to size up what constitutes celebrity here. Often it is the small bit actress sweeping into the room as though it were a stage set. A long hair spouting the latest Communistic cabal. Or just a rude vulgarian with a mincing walk.

Then, with a slight shrug, he walked on and turned into the old Waldorf bar. Prosit!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Do You 'Think Poverty'?

I was blue this morning. Sick of everything.

You know the mood? As if the gilt were all worn off—and the stretch all out of the elastic. What was the use of going on?

And then I opened a letter—the hastily written note of a busy little woman in her hour off. She'd never met me. But something I had once written had helped a bit. And so she thought I might like to know how things had been with her for the last four years.

A desperate struggle—though she didn't put it that way. Yet between the lines, one could read the story of that fear and agony. Widowed—left penniless with a baby in arms—what could she do? She did everything. Took chores you'd hesitate to offer to a passing tramp. Ate scraps. Wore rags. Slept in any corner she could find.

But all these handicaps were trivial beside a menace she carried in her own heart.

"THAT POOR FEELING."

Being poor didn't matter. But FEELING POOR—that mattered terribly! For that was the only thing that could really get her down.

Rags, poor food, a hard bed—why, she might have experienced those on any camping trip, and laughed them off as a lark. Then they wouldn't have mattered, because she would not have let them matter.

But—COULD SHE KEEP THEM FROM MATTERING NOW?

COULD SHE FACE THEM NOW WITH A LAUGH?

COULD SHE REMEMBER THAT THEY WERE JUST OUTSIDE THINGS WHICH DIDN'T COUNT, BECAUSE HER REAL LIFE WAS LIVED INSIDE, NOT OUTSIDE?

Being poor? Oh, that was easy. Because that was just scenery. But feeling poor—that was deadly, because that got under one's skin. Had she the courage to keep it out?

She had. She DID! There, in that simple letter, was the record of a great fight, a gallant victory.

"It's all right now, Elsie," she said. "At first it seemed as if everything was over. There was the loss of my husband, who had served in the World War—then all my savings were wiped out in a bank failure—then my job went. I was terrified. But gradually I began to realize that it wasn't the various losses themselves that were beating me, BUT MY ATTITUDE TOWARD THOSE LOSSES. Fear—that was the thing I had to fight.

"I did fight it, I did overcome it. And now I rejoice because that ghastly fear of poverty can no longer possess me. I'm still as poor as ever—but I don't FEEL POOR.

"I KNOW NOW THAT WE ARE POVERTY STRICKEN IN ATTITUDE MANY TIMES WHEN WE HAVE MONEY AVAILABLE IN THE BANK.

"Today I am not a victim of poverty in my THINKING. I still have the same ability to enjoy the wonderful parks, municipal concerts available to the public at no cost to the individual, the privilege of a house of worship, opportunities to further education (Y. W. C. A. Leisure classes, public library, public schools), the fun of wearing remodeled clothing, utilizing wisely the food allotted to us, enhancing our drab apartment with colorful cretonnes and inexpensive yet lovely pictures. And lastly and the greatest joy of all, sharing the activities of my growing son."

A great letter? I'll say! The medicine for what's ailing most of us.

That "poor feeling"—how often I've had it, too. At the craziest times! Not when I was really poor, with no shoe to my careless heel, no roof over my happy head. Many a day then, I went hungry—and didn't give a darn. And then, contrariwise, when I've been sitting the prettiest—my soul has whimpered in rags!

"FEELING POOR"—there's the Big Bad Wolf that gets us all. But he'll never be able to huff 'n' puff and blow YOUR house down—as long as you can meet him with a grin!

Human Side of the News

Dr. Joseph Bell, Prototype of Sherlock Holmes And His Uncanny Detective Skill

By Edwin C. Hill

ONE FINDS the human side of the news in the briefest of paragraphs. Every week and almost daily the Central Postoffice in London receives letters for a man who never lived, and addressed to a house which never existed.

The man who never lived was Mr. Sherlock Holmes, the most engaging detective of all fiction. The house which never existed is No. 221-D Baker street, where Holmes and his friend, Dr. Watson, in a haze of tobacco smoke, received so many anguished clients and from which they set forth to solve so many fascinating mysteries. No living human being could be more real than Sherlock Holmes, who was only a wraith of the imagination of Arthur Conan Doyle.

Conan Doyle was a struggling country doctor when he conceived the idea of a fiction detective with uncanny powers of deduction; one with the faculty of observation so acutely developed that he could read at a glance the whole life history of a visitor.

But there was an actual living model for Sherlock Holmes, even if Holmes himself never lived. The model, the prototype, was a very remarkable gentleman named Dr. Joseph Bell, who was consulting surgeon to the Royal Infirmary and Royal Hospital for Sick Children at Edinburgh, Scotland, where Conan Doyle received his medical training.

Remarkable For Swift Diagnosis

DR. JOSEPH BELL, thin, wiry, dark, with a high-nosed, acute face, penetrating gray eyes, angular shoulders and a peculiar walk, with a voice high and discordant, possessed an uncanny knack of swift diagnosis as amazing as his skill as a surgeon. Arthur Bartlett Maurice and other scholars who have devoted years to a study of Sherlock Holmes, his work and his peculiarities, tell the story of how Dr. Bell received a civilian patient.

Instantly Bell said to the patient:

"Well, my man, you have served in the Army."
"Aye, sir."
"Not long discharged?"
"No, sir."
"A Highland regiment?"
"Aye, sir."
"A non-commissioned officer?"
"Aye, sir."
"Stationed at Barbados?"
"Aye, sir."

And turning to his students, this amazing Dr. Bell, who would have made a marvelous detective himself, would explain the secret of his deductions, precisely as Sherlock Holmes was accustomed to explain his little miracles to the worshipful Watson.

"You see, gentlemen," Bell would say, "the man was a respectful man, but did not remove his hat. They do not in the army. But he would have learned to do so if he had been out of the army any length of time. He has an air of authority; therefore he was at least a non-commissioned officer. He was obviously Scottish, therefore a Highland regiment. As to Barbados, his complaint was elephantiasis, which is West Indian."

Unsolved Mysteries Left By Doyle

CONAN DOYLE passed from this life three years ago, leaving untold and unwritten many tales to which he alluded. How we would like to read them if some skillful hand like Alexander Woollcott's could grasp the themes and untangle their mysteries. There are so many of fascinating suggestion. Who is there who would not, as Vincent Starrett says in his new "Private Life of Sherlock Holmes," be eager to know what really took place in "The Singular Tragedy of the Atkinson Brothers at Trincomalee," or to learn more of "The Adventure of Amateur Mendicant Society," whose members held a luxurious club in the lower vault of a furniture warehouse?

I, for one, would walk miles to get the truth of "The Singular Adventure of the Grice Patersons in the Island of Uffa," of "Colonel Warburton's Madness," of "The Adventure of Ricoletti of the Club Foot and His Abominable Wife."

Millions, I am sure, would lie awake of nights to read what really occurred in "The Case of Wilson, the Notorious Canary Trainer," "The Delicate Affair of the Reigning Family of Holland," "The Incredible Mystery of Mr. James Phillimore," who, stepping back into his own house to get his umbrella, was never more seen in this world.

So many untold tales, whose very suggested titles cause us to breathe a bit faster: "The Affair of the Politician, the Lighthouse and the Trained Cormorant;" "The Strange Case of Isadora Persona," who was found stark, staring mad, with a match box in front of him which contained a worm unknown to science.

Conan Doyle is gone, but Sherlock Holmes lives in a peculiarly definite sense; as real as D'Artagnan or Cyrano de Bergerac.

Sugar Bloc Aiming Blow At Platt Amendment

By James T. Williams, Jr.

UNDER THE self-assumed title of "Liberals," the beet sugar bloc in the United States Senate, consisting of Senators from the beet sugar states, are hatching a scheme to repeal the permanent treaty between the United States and Cuba. This is the treaty which includes among its provisions the Platt Amendment.

By the terms of the Platt Amendment, Cuba engages never to make a treaty with a foreign power which would jeopardize Cuban independence, and never to permit any foreign power to obtain lodgment in or control over any portion of the island, by colonization or for military or naval purposes.

Cuba binds herself also, under this agreement, never to contract a public debt the service on which cannot be met from ordinary revenue.

In order to safeguard Cuban independence, Cuba consents to intervention on the part of the United States whenever in the judgment of the United States intervention is essential to the maintenance of a government life, property and individual liberty and strong enough to discharge the obligations imposed by the Treaty of Paris on the United States in regard to Cuba.

Amendment Named For Senator

THE PLATT Amendment takes its name from its author, the late Senator Platt, who offered it as an amendment to the military appropriations bill which passed the Senate on February 17, 1901, and the House on March 1 of the same year.

Cuba embodied the Platt Amendment in her constitution and also in a permanent treaty with the United States.

This was done under the administration of President McKinley. The sequel to the Platt Amendment came under the succeeding administration of the first President Roosevelt. His administration negotiated and obtained the ratification by the Senate of a reciprocity treaty with Cuba. This treaty was fought by the same gigantic sugar lobby that is now conducting a sapping expedition against the Platt Amendment.

The reasons why Cuba is entitled to a liberal reciprocity treaty with the United States were never better stated than Mr. Root stated them in his annual report as Secretary of War for 1901, when he said:

"Cuba has acquiesced in our right to say that she shall not put herself in the hands of any other power, whatever her necessities, and in our right to insist upon the maintenance of free and orderly government throughout her limits, however impoverished and desperate may be her people.

"Correlative to this right is a duty of the highest obligation to treat her not as an enemy, not at arm's length as an aggressive commercial rival, but with generosity which toward her will be but justice; to shape our laws so that they shall contribute to her welfare as well as our own.

"Aside from the moral obligation to which we committed ourselves when we drove Spain out of Cuba, and aside from the ordinary considerations of commercial advantage involved in a reciprocal treaty, there are the weightiest reasons of American public policy pointing in the same direction; for the peace of Cuba is necessary to the peace of the United States; the health of Cuba is necessary to the health of the United States.

"The same considerations which led to the war with Spain now require that a commercial arrangement be made under which Cuba can live. The condition of the sugar and tobacco industries in Cuba is already such that the earliest possible action by Congress on this subject is desirable."

Nothing "Liberal" In Their Attitude

EVERY WORD of this statement of Mr. Root is as true today as it was the day it was written. We owe Cuba a more liberal reciprocity treaty than the one now in force. The beet sugar Senators are determined to defeat any new reciprocity treaty after they have repealed the Platt Amendment. If they can repeal this amendment, they will then declare that this country is under no obligation to enter into any reciprocal relations with Cuba.

There is nothing "liberal" about this attitude of the "beet sugar" Senators toward Cuba. It is the reverse of liberal because it involves the sacrifice of the best interests of all of the Cuban people and the American people, numbering more than 120 million, to the selfish interest of 100,000 Americans engaged in growing sugar beets.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

Regret

Regret? I will not let it
Stain one gold morn or noon,
Or cast a hint of shadow

A wailing, restless ghost,
Too futile for restoring
The treasure that is lost.

Regret was never able
To bless, to build, to bind,
To lend one gleam of comfort
To weary heart or mind.

Regret can tear and torture;
But it can never bring
One song of any lark back,
One petal of the spring!

O, I will pay with gladness,
In full, life's every debt;
But not the tribute of one hour
Give I to vain regret!
